We hear many good sermons now-a-days the Bible is a very different thing from the from the text that the chief duty of woman is to render home attractive to her husband. No doubt any good wife will make this her crowning pleasure; but where duty is in the Scriptures put in several places the question, there is another phase of the names of imaginary creatures where the sacmatter which is sadly overlooked—the duty red writers speak of real ones. These of tie husband to make home pleasant for his wife. As a very small portion of his knowledge of natural history which was waking hours are spent in the house, where his wife's whole life is spent, it would seem quite as important that her convenience and tastes should be consulted as well as his. In their capacity, as head of the family, men think that theordering of the house naturally belong to them. They build to suit their own taste and convenience, lay out the grounds to suit their own fancy, and manage things generally with some deference to their wife's wishes, it is true, but a great deal more to their own. And sometimes their caprices wofully conflict with the com-fort of the household. The home should belong to the wife; she should plan the house, arrange the furniture, lay out the garden, and order all the details. She knows from experience better than all her husband can possibly do, what arrangement best conduces to her housekeeping convenience. It would be just as absurd for her to undertake to be the architect of his warehouse, and to place the desks, drawers, and holes of his counting room, as for him to divine from his omniscience the most convenient spot for her cupboards. In the same manner, if trees are to be cut down or left standing, or flower-beds to be laid out around the house, her taste should be consulted first, for the sight of these things must delight or chafe her all day long, for they are of very little practical conse-quence to the husband in the evenings, which are his chief time at home. Again, the homestead should belong to the wife in fee simple; she has a right to the nest in which she rears her young, and ought to be assured that it can never be torn from her by those reverses of fortune to which, in this country, all are so liable. Women all feel this, though they are apt to lack the courage to say it; and if their comfort and convenience were once paramount at home, if they were quite certain that the spot to which they are so often advised to confine their aspirations really belonged to them, and was wholly within their control, they would gladly assume the responsibility, and strive with much greater alacrity than they do now to force their husbands to acknowledge the ability of their generalship, and to appreciate the delights of home. -- Harper's Bazar.

Work and Wages. The venerable proverb, "The laborer is worthy of his hire," does not seem to be regarded as anything more than theoretically true. Mechanics, for instance, are among the most dilligent of laborers, but they ren-der more important and valuable services to society for a less pecuniary return than any other class of men. The great mass of these intelligent and faithful laborers scarcely earn more than a scanty living. From some interesting statistics lately published regard-United States, we learn that the average life of our mechanics is estimated at forty-six and a half years, and the average num-he told her he would have to take his gun to ber of days' work performed in this climate is 250 days in a year. Here is exhibited a degree of attention to business, not equaled field, who invited Miss King to accompany pensation of such a laborer at three dollars per day, he would earn in the 250 days $750. Erom this deduct his board and clothing, but supposed that he had but received no answer. She called his name but received no answer. She called a second and he has left but $450 for keeping $300, and he has left but $450 for keeping his family, for amusements, for books, for educational purposes and contingencies. The average working years of a mechanic are estimated at swenty, which would make his gross earnings in a life time, on the basis above named, $15,000.-N. Y. Commercial Butletin.

Cost of Living in Germany. A letter from Dresden says: "Gentlemen's clothing cost about half what it does in Providence. The last suit I bought of one of our well known Westminster street tailors was priced at $70. My tailor here furnished me the same quality of goods at $36. An overcoat which in Providence would have cost $70 to $75 was here obtained for $30. Shoes are also cheap. Laced walking boots, such as Rice in Boston or Livingston in Providence will furnish for from $16 to $20, I have here obtained for $6, and been told I paid too much. The best shirts are $2,50 each, and indeed all wearing apparel for gentlemen is exceedingly cheap. Boy's clothing is, of course, proportionably reasonable, and the little backs can be covered and the feet shod here in Dresden for about half what it costs at home. Unfortunately, I cannot give any accurate statements regarding the cost of ladies' articles, but I hear that, while not as cheap as gencompared with our home prices. I know, however, that they can revel in new kid gloves, the best of which (German make) can be obtained for $1 per pair, while 75 cents furnishes a capital article. Nearly everything is in Dresden proportionably cheap. A drive in a public hack, to any point in the city can be taken for 12 cents. Good concerts range in price from 10 cents to $1, while a box seat (the best) in the opera is but $1,25.

The only breaks in the electric girdle, at the present time, are between a point on Simpson's river, 260 miles southeasterly of Sitka, to a point on the Asiatic coast, 42 degrees N. Guide To Marriage and Conjugal Felicity: The humane lews of benevo-tent thyscians, on the Errors and Ausses inclient to Youth and Early Manhood, such in sealed buter evelopes, free of charge. Address HOWARD ASSOCIATION, Box P., Philadelphia, Fa. myliquest

A correspondent of the London Field asks, "Can any one tell me what a cockatrice is, such as we read of in the Bible and in old legends?" To which the editor of A Woman's Views About Women's Homes. that journal replies: "The !cockatrice of fabulous creature of which we read in legends and heraldic books. It is a great misfortune that our venerable translators of errors are of course due to the slender current when the English version of the Bible was made. Cockatrice is the proper name of an imaginary flying reptile, the offspring of a cock and a screent. The figure assigned to it in heraldy may be seen in works on that subject. It was supposed to have the power of killing by means of its breath, or even by its look, and hence we read in Shakespeare of the death-darting eye of cockatrice." With regard to the Biblical animals a few times called cockatrice in our version, there is some difficulty. In the first place two Hebrew words are so rendered, and therefore two different kinds of reptiles may be meant. There is the word Txiphoni, out of which the Greeks concocted the monsters, Typhon and Tisiphone. This occurs in Isa. xi. 8, lix. Jer. viii. 17, as "cockatrice;" whereas in Prov. xxiii. 32, it is translated "adder." A shorter term of the word tzepah, appears as "cockatrice," in Isa. xiv. 29. The word epha, also, for which "viper" is put in the text, id once represented in the margin by "cockatrice." To know what has been said about these words, recourse must be made to some good Bible Diction ary, or to such a work as the excellent "Natural History of the Bible," by Mr. Tristram. Mr. Tristram thinks the great yellow viper is the reptile indicated; others that it is the sand viper, &c. There is no doubt that the Hebrew terms denote venomous serpents, and that the names are descriptive of their hissing, but how to identify them with any particular species is one of the many difficult problems in Biblical zoology.' Steel Rails Not a Success.

The use of steel, instead of iron, for the rails of railroads, has not been productive of the saving which was at first expected of The surface of the steel rail is indeed harder, and therefore wears better than iron; but steel has not the tough, fibrous character of iron, and in frosty weather it breaks with alarming ease. Then, although the first cost of steel is nearly double that of iron, old steel rails sell for little or nothing, while old iron rails are worth half the price of new. Taking all these facts into account, it is found to be cheaper to lay down good iron rails than steel ones, except in the vicinity of stations where there is a great deal of friction from the frequent breaking up of trains, and but little rapid movement. Experiments are, however, being made, and with considerable success, to manufacture an iron rail with a steel top, so as to combine the toughness and cheapness of iron with the hard wearing surface of steel.

> EXPERIMENTS have recently been tried in the machine shops of the Western Railroad, in Paris, in the new art of welding iron by pressure instead of by a hammer on an anvil. It was found that union of the two masses of iron was effected only superficially by means of the hammer, but that a con-tinued steady pressure had a far greater effect in producing a thorough junction. Among other experiments, two iron bars, 14 inches in diameter, were heated to the welding point and brought under the hydraulic press. The welding was effected with extraordinary quickness, the fibres of the iron being thoroughly reticulated with each other. The joined portion of the bars was quite as strong as anywhere else. A microscopic section of the joint showed a perfectly homogeneous texture.
