swallowing development, so that we do not take stock in the belief that the petroleum trade of Pennsylvania will be exhausted in a few years for want of producing wells, for so soon as old tracts give out new territory will be found abundantly able to supply the demand.

When, a few days since, the GAZETTE invited its readers to consider the not improbable results, to flow from the recent national verdict in behalf of Liberty and Equality, we directed especial attention to the effect of that decision in conformation to the desire of contending nationalities to exchange their own nominal but unprofitable independence for the vast higher privileges of American citizenship.
