the spring fatter and sleeker than if fed claim, while the pork and beef that is on hay; the reason I think is because it sold is used up in buying fresh meats and is equally as nourishing and requires less fish; so that all of his income is wheat and muscular force to chew and digest it. In husking, care should be taken that no nubbins be left with the fodder, for it induces mice and rats to work in it, cutting and spoiling a large percentage of it; $46 threshing, $30 extra days' work, $60 and then in feeding, the stock will get a taste of the corn, and in their search for $986. To this he added interest on more will trample it under their feet and spoil it. Feed often and but little at a and wife, $300—making a grand total time, just what they will eat up clean. $2,027 Increasary to get his income of £xperienca will soon teach you how much that is; and then their appetites are always good, and there will be but little if any wasted. You will of course have butts resting upon the ground. feed that I ever fed. To raise take a his favor of $464, an accumulated fund, piece of good strong ground, plow deep with its interest, on which he might retire piece of good strong ground, plow deep and harrow till well pulverized, then lay off from three to three and a half feet apart for your rows, plant your hills about fifteen or twenty inches apart, with from six to eight kernels in a hill. Give it one good working with the cultivator and hoe, and it is done till harvest time. Cut while the corn is in the dough; cure well, then tie up in bundles and put under a shelter; and in the winter you will find your cows to give more and better milk from it than any dry fodder they ever eat.

FEEDING WHOLE CORN TO CATTLE. It is an expensive system of management to feed whole grains to any kind of animals. All kinds of certain grains are provided with a tough hull or skin, which the digestive powers of most animals will not dissolve; consequently, if the skin is not broken before the grain enters the stomach, the kernels will pass off with the droppings without affording the animal that swallowed the grain any more nourishment than fragments of wood

During the month of August last, the writer procured a quantity of horse manure for top-dressing strawberry plants, and in a few days after the mulch was spread around the plants the unbroken grains of oats vegetated, so that the en-tire surface of the ground appeared as green as a lawn. This fact showed conclusively that much of the grain had never afforded the animals that swallowed them any mourishment at all. Young horses having sound and sharp teeth will sometimes crush every kernel. But old horses with poor teeth frequently swallow half their mess of oats without breaking the skin of the kernel.

When mills are at a distance, and peo-ple will persist in feeding whole grain, it will always be found of more advantage to soak the grain at least twenty-four hours before using it. Suppose, for example, a teamser is accustomed to feed a team eight quarts of Indian corn and oats at each feeding, say three times a day. Let the grain be put in a pail and covered with warm water every time the team in fed. This plan would require three pails when the team is fed three times daily. Warm water is far letter than cold water, as cold water in cold weather will soften the grain but little. Teamsters may rest assured that it will pay well for all trouble before feeding it —N. Y. Times.

BROWSING STOCK. Those who reside in regions where timber is plentiful and of little or no commercial value, can carry cattle and sheep through the winter by supplying them with browse daily. The trees suitable for this purpose are sugar maple, beech, bass wood and birsh. Cattle and sheep will leave the best hay to feed on the buds and tender twigs of these trees, and we fine condition on this food, with an occasional feed of corn in the ear.

Where land is being cleared up, this aid is readily supplied, and the chopping is usually done in the winter season; but where this is not the case, let the trees be felled daily and the limbs chopped down, so that the stock can reach twigs readily, and they will get along finely. The safest way is to tell the trees before the stock is let out of their enclosure, lest being on hand when the trees, fall, they should be injured or killed in the operation.-Rural New Yorker-

EGGS IN WINTER. J. L. Peabody, of Macoupin, Illinois, tells the Peoria Firmer what he learned of a Kansas man about making hens lay

"He told me if I would' let my hens huddle together in some warm corner, and not let them roost, I should get plenty of eggs. I had about twenty hens; my hen house was a rough shed, eight feet square, with a small window and door on the east. I took down all the roosting poles, leaving the nest boxes only. With a few short boards I made a shall shed, about four feet square, on the south side of the larger one, and covered it with corn-fodder. (Straw is better.) I made a hole for the hens to pass from the large house into the small one. The result was my hens continued to lay all through the times at first; they will soon learn to go in themselves. Put in wood ashes occasionally to keep them free from vermin. There are a great many who are not able

PROFITABLENESS OF WHEAT. At a meeting of the Farmers Association of Western New York, last Wednesday, Dr. Craig, of Churchville, said he was not much of a farmer, but in examining the question of the profitableness of wheat with regard to other crops, he found many difficulties to encumber in coming to a very definite conclusion. Difference of soil, location and different modes of farming make important items; low's Militia Order; but if you should see

This is a favorite mode of answering such questions with many farmers, but it will be seen at once that the reasoning is cow in a bundle, for convenience in hand product of his labor. By this it will be seen that it cost that farmer about $30 to raise an acre of wheat-which was not very economic farming-for, after a conversation with a dozen or more farmers, I find the following table to be the average of their estimate of crops for the last five years:

The number of sheep slaughtered by these domestic darlings was over thirty-four thousand last year, and nearly twenty thousand were worried by them so that their value was injured. This loss does not reach the aggregate of some previous years, but it is enough. The extent of the infatuation for dogs is shown by the statistics. There are over one hundred and seventy-six thousand of them in the State, and the cost of their keeping, and from the mischief they do, cannot be less than a million of dollars. The only return for this expense is the chance that they will bite sheep, or, run-ning mad, bite their owners. It does not

Correspondence of the Pittsburgh Gazette.] MEMPHIS, Tenn., January 31, 1869. I wish to give you facts which have come under my own observation relating to the "situation" in this region of our country.

SUFFRAGE. The distranchised, so far as I have learned, are in favor of universal suffrage; but I fear the black man is not sufficiently. educated to combat their old enemy at the polls; indeed I have heard it intimated that as soon as these secure the ballot it is their intention to establish a law of "enforced apprenticeship," which would only be another name for slavery. For four years they despised the Union ballot. It will take fully eight years for them to learn how sacred a privilege the ballot is. EDUCATION.

The blacks are all wanting to learn. A vast body of them are learning. I have been in these schools and witnessed just as good scholarship as one will see in any common school in the North. You will see boys of full-blooded African descent, and tender twigs of these trees, and we with odd looking heads, performing diffi-have them to come out in the spring in cult problems on the black board with all the grace and ease of a Yankee boy. Take all the children, black and white, and it is my opinion there are very many more colored children attending school than white children. INDUSTRY. It has been said very generally by the whites down here that the negro is lazy and will not work—I think it likely when they first came out of slavery such was the fact, but that is not the case now. The large and valuable yield of cotton, cern, wheat, potatoes, etc., attest their industry, indeed the black man is the only outdoor field laborer, as a rule, in the South, and certainly when their mental culture is brought up to that of their physical, they must become a strong and valuable element in our country.

TEMPERANCE. It is said by the whites here that the negro is drunken and debauched. That there are such, I do not deny, but that such instances are numerous, or as frequent as among whites, I deny. You will but very rarely see a black man drunk even in such a place as this, where they are so numerous.

ECONOMY. It is said the black man spends his money foolishly. Doubtless that is true. They have not become as economical as they should, and yet their Savings Bank "You will have to drive them in a few less at first; they will soon learn to go menting rapidly. They have not much incentive to save money. Their great want, wish and ambition is to have land, to build an extensive hennery. But any one can fix up a place like this in an hour or two, with very little expense."

and that their old masters will never rent or sell them have. They will never rent or sell their land. Their whole idea is to keep them in the most service situation on their own, and yet the negro the last year undertook the sale of their own half of the cotton raised on the shares instead of giving the sale of it to the master, and the result is that the negro, has as much money as the master, and it is my opin-ion they will save more of it than the

it is hardly to be expected that all farmers these disguised assassing enter your car will think alike. One farmer to whom I and take off by force, one or more passes and the contract of the propounded the question, gave me an elaborate statement of his experience in growing wheat. He has 100 acres that he divides thus: Fifteen acres of hay, five acres of oats, five acres of corn and potatoes; thirty acres of fallow and pasture.

The propounded the question, gave me an elaborate statement of his experience in fix those horrible eyes upon you, you would feel like thanking Brownlow for the militia. It would fill many sheets to detail the atrocities perpetrated by these wildlines. The work here reference in fix those horrible eyes upon you, you would feel like thanking Brownlow for the militia. It would fill many sheets to detail the atrocities perpetrated by these wildlines. Corn Fodder.

A writer in the Germantown Telegraph, five acres of fallow and pasture, five acres of buildings, fences and says he considers good corn fodder as good as the best hay for young stock or milel cows. He says:

A writer in the Germantown Telegraph, five acres of buildings, fences and speech before the war here, neither is there now, it is dangerous to speak your mind—you must keep quiet. I have lismitely cover for wheat he gets transport bush. heard them curse the Radicals—and add "d—n them, if we can't get at them in daylight, it is certain we can go for them in the dark."

THE MILITIA OF ARKANSAS. It is generally reported by the rebel sheets that the militia of Arkansas are perpetrating the greatest crimes and outages. I see persons occasionally from Arkansas, and learn from them there are no such disturbances—only that they are putting a stop to the K. K. K. I will write you again from this region.

The Abolition of Spanish Slavery. A special dispatch from Madrid, Reb-uary 5th, to the New York Tribune, says: As the time for the meeting of the Constituent Cortes—the 11th of February -is near at hand, the Provisional Government are busy completing the draft of a new Constitution, which they will re-commend to the Cortes for adoption. Little is as yet known of the articles of their draft, but the Abolitionists, who embrace men of all political parties, have at length succeeded in obtaining from the Government the official assurance that their draft will contain a clause prohibiting Slavery in all the Spanish possessions. The best method of freeing the slaves is to be left altogether to the decision of the Cortes. As it is known that the Liberal Unionists, the Progressists, and the Republicans are generally in favor of the immediate abolition of Slavery and that even some of the Absolutists favor such a measure, it is expected that the Constituent Cortes will adopt this article of the new Constitution by an overhelming majority.
