PETROLEUM at Antwerp, 5816 . Gold closed in New York yesterday at 135.

Ex PRESIDENT JOHNSON is to be received, on his return to Nashville, with a banquet and a torch-light procession, He may be prevailed with to make a few remarks.

THE ALASKA INVESTIGATION has developed one fact which may prove of real service: it is that the Russian Government was fully aware that the treaty was not binding, until ratified by a House appropriation. Who can doubt that Denmark has the same understanding, in the St. Thomas affair?

A MORE extended report of the Supreme Court decision, in Bronson vs. Rodes, does not sustain one conclusion which the synopsis previously telegraphed seemed to justify—that the Court thereby substantially affirmed the validity of the laws making the Treasury paper a legal tender. The opinion embodies several dicta which favor that validity, but no such point is expressly adjudged. The dissenting Justice (MILLER) expressly held the Treasury notes to be a legal tender, any notes were issued. The Court seems, however, to be unanimous in affirming that "express contracts, for the payment of coined dollars, can only be satisfied by the payment of coined dollars."

Ir Congress can forego debate upon West Indian annexation long enough the benefits of our citizenship, we venture to suggest that they give a fair hearing to the application of the Choctaw Indians for admission as a State of the Union. This people are far more highly civilized than the average whites of Texas, for, having a written Constitution and a regularly organized Government, they uphold the one and obey the other. In customs, morals, costume, religious or secular education, and in sedulous application as a people to the varied industrial pursuits of civilized life, these Indians are fully up to the popular average anywhere southwest from Tennessee. Numbering but thirty thousand souls, the reterritorial status, with the admission of a: legislation. In logic, as in the highest justice, such an act would fittingly crown sims, by the reservation-system, at the rescue of the aboriginal race from demortheir ultimate elevation to some plane of useful citizenship.

GOVERNMENTAL PATRUNAGE The fact is so palpable as not to escape the observation of the dullest intellects that the patronage of the federal government has swollen to such yast dimensions as to become a source of frightful corruption. In the order of natural development this point must have been sooner otherwise than that a country of the unmoual length and breadth of the United States, occupying the whole belt of the tion and even enslavement. temperate zone across the continent, and somewhat more both north and south, stocked abundantly with the choicest wealths of soil and mines, and rapidly filling up with inhabitants drawn only by the love of adventure, and the hope of bettering their fortunes, from the most enterprising and enlightened nations on the face of the earth, should quickly be in possession of overflowing revenues, appealing at once to the ambition and cupidity of its foremost citizens. Under all forms of government and religion, sand in all conditions of mental enlight.

Send in all conditions of mental enlight current and moral discipline, corresponding facts have been evolved. Under monarchies, a few prominent families are enriched at the public expense; the redeeming feature being that they ordinarily religious, after they have the laws, has not yet been established,

Of a ments which cannot now be obtained. sudden, Congress contracted the habit of dealing with immense sums, beyond all former experience, and, simultaneously, the people discovered their capacity for sustaining burdens to which they had not een accustomed. Nor was this all, or the worst of the case. The expansion of the currency, by a prodigious volume of irredeemable paper promises to pay, lifted hundreds of thousands of men out of debt, seriously at the expense of their creditors, and into circumstances of opulence or something akin thereto. And, then, while the process of inflation went on, and any commodity bought to-day was sure to sell to morrow at a round advance, it could not be otherwise than that a spirit of inordinate speculation and of unwonted extravagance should be engendered. Business men became eager for government contracts, and did not hesitate to tempt the officials having the granting of them by munificent largesses. Cupidity and corruption among the people acted upon placemen, and was reacted thence upon the people. It is not easy to see how matters could have been different, considering the materials of

to be deplored, because inevitable. The slime of a serpent can often be detected after he is gone; and the war has lest mischievous legacies behind it in a depth of corruption so profound, as to for the final result. A halt must not only be called, but enforced. The outgoing Congress is clearly not adequate to this duty. On the contrary, it gives signs of a recklessness in appropriations which fills the whole country with dismay, excepting only the limited few who are to be aggrandized and enriched by the hameless jobberies. It is no wonder, in view of the exhibition presented, that General GRANT has and that, as such, they were capable of dis- felt constrained to fall back upon his own charging a gold debt contracted before judgment in organizing a new administration, charged with the high responsibility of arresting the downward tendency of public affairs, and so retrenching expenditures as to preserve the National honor, and at the same time lessen the pressure of taxation. He has not seen that he could safely look to the two Houses. as now organized, for that kind and deto consider a better claim, nearer home, to gree of help he needed. The fault was not with him, but with those who forced the necessity upon him.

UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE.

Whoever has considered attentively the progress of mankind in any one department of activity, has been deeply impressed with the fact that the movement except in special epochs or crises, has been surprisingly slow. Take an illustration from manufacturing industry. Iron has been made for many ages. The manufacture and use of it form the basis of all civilization. Take iron away, and the foremost nations would sink at once back into the flint-hatchet era of the race; cognition of a Choctaw State is out of all that is, into the grossest barbarism. Six question, but an allowance of a specific thousand years, at least, before the simple principle, known as the ELLERSHAUSEN delegate to a voice without a vote upon process, was discovered and applied, and the floor of the House, would be not only the application of that principle is as yet compatible with the Constitution, but exceedingly crude and imperfect. Somemight easily be vindicated as a wise dething has, indeed, been accomplished; parture from the policy of existing Indian but the revelation of possibilities in the future, by modifications of the method, promise yet grander results. Who can the new phase of our Indian policy which | tell how many ages may elapse before this promise shall be realised? Take another illustration from the domains of manners alization and speedy extinction, and at and governments. There have been, all and governments. There have been, all and governments. There have been, all through the ages, dim perceptions of the through the ages, dim perceptions of the cardinal ideas not only of human freedom, but of human equality. Boudha, the holy hermit, from his mountain of retreat in Central Thibet, astonished his contemporaries by the bold and unqualities contemporaries by the bold and unqualities. In still higher antiquity, glimpaes were obtained, here and there, of Brotherhood of Men; but then the doctrine was so stated and held as to be consistent with the most exacting and offensive systems of primogeniture. Brotherhood was so interpreted as to comport with dominal interpreted as to comport with dominal interpreted as to comport with dominal through the properties of the facts as represented are interpreted as to comport with dominal through the properties of the facts as represented are interpreted as to comport with dominal through the properties of the facts are represented as the comport with dominal through the properties of the facts are represented as the comport with dominal through the properties of the facts are represented as the comport with dominal through the properties of the facts are represented as the comport with dominal through the properties of the facts are represented as the comport with dominal through the properties of the facts are represented as the comport with dominal through the properties of the facts are represented as the comport with dominal through the properties of the facts are represented as the comport with the most exact through the properties of the facts are represented that the facts are represented as the comport with the most exact the properties of the facts are represented as the comport of the facts are represented that the facts are represented or later reached. It seems probable that the Fortieth Congress, in the few days that remain to publics there are constant successions of it, will superadd to the claims it has alblood-suckers, who fasten upon the ready earned to the gratitude of the pres-Treasury, and manage to fill themselves ent age and of posterity, by the submismore or less completely. It took less but it will so content us to gain that much that we have no inclination to embarras the movement by insisting upon enlarge-

will secure, almost immediately, ratification by the needful number of Legislatures, saye two, to give it full validity as part and parcel of the Constitution. The assent of the other Legislatures will not have to be waited for very long. The Southern States already have black suffrage fastened upon them, even against their consent, and will not be tardy in doing by Northern States what has been done by them. If this seems to be an infringement of the Golden Rule, the discrepancy is more in sound than in substance. At all events, there is a political justice in the commending by Southern States of the chalice of Universal Suifrage to the lips of those who made them drink of it; and the sooner this wholesome retribution shall be accomplished, the better for both races here, and for civil freedom everywhere.

That the Legislature of Pennsylvania now in session, will pass this Constitutional Amendment, if it shall reach it in time, we do not question, and the Amendment will reach it in season if the current Congress shall pass it-for the Legislature which human nature, on the average, is will remain in session a fortnight after composed; but the result is none the less the term of this Congress shall expire. If such action shall be had by the Legislature, the whole matter will be disposed of, so far as this State will be concerned. Of course, there will be to endure greed for public plunder so keen, and a the clamor with which the Democrats assail every vindication of popular rights, awaken the most painful apprehensions and, iedeed, every measure they disapprove, whether involving elementary principles or only topics, of simple expediency. But that clamor has become so common that even the most timid voters have ceased to be frightened by it.

What a prodigious din the Democratic orators and journals raised last year about greenbacks for bonds," They started out with the idea that every tax-payer was a scoundrel, and would join in effecting an immense national swindle for the sake of relieving his own burdens. We knew and said, when they started, that a calculation of results so clearly based on the presumption that the people were nearly all either knaves or fools, would come to the town, and returned next day, havgrief; and it did. There has been no Democratic clamor on that subject since the election, nor will there be hereafter. Nor is this the total upshot of that experment upon the credulity and cupidity of gent ranks. the people. Manifestly, that result has other applications, and not least to the question of Universal Suffrage.
