An Old Citizen Gone.

In these columns yesterday was announced the death of Mr. Jeremiah O'Donovan, a gentleman , who had throughout nearly half a century taught school in this city, and who occupied prominent place as a man of fine education and high order of literary talent. He was the author of a history of Ireland in verse, which attracted much attention, and which has ever been regarded as a work of much merit and at the same time a literary curiosity. The deeu as a work of muon meris and at the same time a literary curlosity. The deceased centributed largely to the current literature of his day, and left behind him a large quantity of unpublished manuscript. He was a kind, good hearted man, and one where manuary will ted man, and one whose memory will long be kindly cherished by large circles of friends and acquaintances. Had he been less retiring in his disposition and less careless of the world's estimation, he would have risen high in the ranks of men of mark, having the genius and education to sustain himself there with credit and distinction. He was a native of Cork, Ireland, and had altained the

The Case of the Trinity Church. We have received, from a responsible source, the annexed statement of facts bearing upon this controversy, which we print, with the writer's deductions:

In 1787, John Penn and John Penn, Jr., proprietors of Pennsylvania, granted to the "congregation of Episcopalians" in Pittsburgh certain lots of ground fronting on Sixth street and extending back to Virgin alley, for a burial place and house of worship. The congregation worshiped in the old "Round Church" until 1825 when the presentature of until 1825, when the present church ediwas erected on the aforesaid ground, and has continued to be used as a place of worship since.

It has been manifest to the Vestry for several years that, owing to some radical defects in the structure, it could not be used much longer. The annual expense of preserving and rendering safe the old of preserving and tendering sale the old edifice for the past five years has been considerable, and this fact, together with considerable, and this fact, together with the growth of the congregation, render-ing the church inadequate for the re-quired sittings, has caused the necessity of a new and larger edifice to pressitself on the members, and at different times effects have been made to provide means efforts have been made to provide means for that purpose. These efforts have at last been crowned with success, and plans for a new church and new chapel, estimated to cost about $200,000, have been adopted.

As the new buildings, to answer their As the new buildings, to answer their purpose, must be larger than the old ones, ground heretofore used for burial purposes must be occupied. To provide against possible objection, the Vestry have asked the Legislature to pass a bill authorizing the church or chapel to be crected over all obsolete or unknowmand immarked graves, on the site of the prounmarked graves, on the site of the pro-posed e ections, and to remove such graves as are marked by inscriptions to graves as are marked by inscriptions to other parts of the ground or to one of the rural cemeteries near the city.

Against the granting of this authority Mr. Isaac Craig has remonstrated. He charges that the Trinity Church has no title to the ground; that it was given by the Penns for burial purposes exclusively and forever; that "in the early part of the present century, the Trinity congregation, by some 'hocus-pocus,' got posgation, by some 'hocus-pocus,' got possession of a portion of the ground and built the present church on a part of lot No. 435, &c."; also, that, "the Vestry of No. 435, &c.": also, that s"the Vestry of Trinity Church design grading the ancient burial ground down to a level with the street and alley, and to encroach thereon with their new church."

Until these remarkable charges were fulminated, the congregation of Trinity parish had never heard the title of their estate onestioned, and many of them now fulminated, the constraint of their parish had never heard the title of their parish had never heard the title of their parish had never heard the title of the mow wonder if these things be really so. We have to ask him, also, to withdraw his statement that the Vestry design grading their lot to the level of the street and alley. As we know it has been resolved by the Vestry not to do so, but to preserve generally the present elevation of their grounds.

There have been no interments in Triality Church yard for several years, and the remains of many have been and the remains of many have been and the remains of many have been the several years.

We submit that the friends of the dead proposed to be covered by the new church, could not ask or desire a more fitting and enduring manument. nonument over them or a greater security for the future than the elegant temples of worship now proposed by the Vestry of the Church.

We further respectfully submit that from what is here stated the Legislature should not involve the Parish in longer delay by hesitating to grant the authority provided for in the bill now on the files of the Senate. Like authority has here-tofore been granted in all cases when asked for, and several cemeteries consecuted with various city churches have asked for, and several cometeries con-nected with various city churches have been wholly removed, under legislative sanction. To deny the prayer of the Trinity corporation would, therefore, ap-pear to be unkind and invidious. K.

What They Will Do. A New Attraction. The enlargement of the area of business locations and facilities in our city, shows very conclusively the drift of trade, and the fact that Pittsburgh is, which ought to have been conceded always by west of the Alleghenies. The fruits of consolidation are also already apparent by unsettling the old lines which regulated certain localities and streets for business purposes. Streets heretofore regarded as favorite resorts for certain departments, are now viewed as more suitable places for specialities in trade, while other thoroughfares have suddenly became attractive for business houses became attractive for business houses became attractive for business houses Streets formerly occupied as places of residence are almost completely metamorphosed by the inroads of business. Fine Roasted Almonds at 112 Federal street, Allegheny, Geo. Beaven. Linen, Pillow Caring, Sheeting and Shirting, at Bates & Ball's. A Distinguished Methodist Minister and prominent Temperance Lecturer once remarked that go where he would, from one end of the country to the other, he hardly ever failed to fine Plantation Bitters, and while he condemned the practice of using these Bitters too freely, he could not considerate the practice of using these Bitters too freely, he could not conscientiously say that he would discard them from the side. would discard them from the side board, would discard them from the side-Doard, for he himself had experienced beneficial results from their use, and that, from a long and close observation, he was convinced that when used moderwas convinced that when used moderately, and as a medicine exclusively, they were all that was recommended. At the same time he warned his hearers not to pull the cork too often, for they, were far too pleasant a tonic to trifle with.
