[Correspondence of the Pitt-burgh Gazette.]

DRESDEN, Feb. 10, 1869. On issuing from the depot in Dresden one comes at once across a peculiar custom, peculiar to Germany at least. There stands a long row of bright blue carriages, "droskies," as they call them, but where is the uproar and confusion of the eager drivers that an American naturally expects! All the drivers sit unconcernealy in their seats and do not even rouse out of their comfortable doze! A man at the door in a suit of plain livery be fully realized until often seen. It is thrusts into your hands a ticket bearing a truly "The Pearl of the Gallery." number, and points to the carriages; you find for yourself the carriage whose number corresponds to your ticket, and rouse the slumbering driver, who very slowly and deliberately closes the door, mounts the box and starts. One does not mind the slow rate however; there is much to see, and besides the windows rattle and jingle so that one is really under the imyou go, through a modern-looking city with wide streets and many open squares, past a statue of a rearing horse with a rider in Roman armor, "Frederick Augustus the strong," not a wonderful work of art for one's first view of this artistic city. Soon you rumble over a fine bridge, with an unbroken stream of people on either side; it is the "Elbe bridge," more than five hundred years old, strong to stem the rushing river and bear its tide of short lived human beings for another five hundred years. There is no sign of age in those low round arches and heavy piers. Just at the end of that bridge stands a house, on the corner of which is a large flying figure of Time, with scythe and hourglass held high aloft—the age of the glass, and the stream of living beings, so short-lived in comparison, always impress me strongly. Over the bridge, we enter the "Schloss platz." Here are many of the beautiful buildings of Dresden. On your left, the broad, handsome flight of steps, adorned with two groups of statuary, of uncommon beauty leads to an array of uncommon beauty leads to a statuary. broad, handsome flight of steps, adorned with two groups of statuary, of uncommon beauty, leads to a promenade, thickly planted with trees, laid out on the old fortifications, and ending in the "Belvidere Saloon," one of the delights of Dresden, of which I shall often have occasion to sneak. The Catholic church are neglected in the control of the delights of them to paper.

But nothing is so unsatisfactory as writing about pictures. They are so real, making such strong and marked impressions, yet so delicate and subtle, that it is quite impossible to transfer any just idea of them to paper.

Dresden has quite as high a reputation for its music as its pictures—instrumental to speak. The Catholic church, an ugly building, but adorned with many fine statues: the old, gloomy Palace; the Royal Theatre, and—dear to all lovers of Art the far-famed picture-gallery;—all these cluster round or near the "Schloss platz." Compared with quaint old Bamberg and many other German towns, Dresden is modern-looking, but its many bow windows, one on top of the other to the very roof, and hanging suspended to every corner house, its high, crumpled, red-tiled roofs, with dormer windows, like sleepy, half-shut eyes, one could never for a moment imagine himself in America. I fine did, he need only bring his eyes again to earth and watch for a moment the crowd that sweeps by; little glass of beer. Not as Americans suppose, swallowing it by the dozen glasses, but one, or at most two, lasting them a swomen with huge baskets on their backs. bending under loads a man might well grumble at; officers and soldiers innumerable, market women sitting in half barrels, with little pots of charcoal under their feet to keep them warm; and now and then, to relieve the monotony of rather homely faces and homely dresses, a bright, pretty American woman-for our countrywomen are acknowledged with piles of pretty work and bright knitbeauties here, and while many dress rather extravagantly, all dress tastefully, which cannot be said of the German

And what do our countrymen do in Dresden? The world is very much the same everywhere! Foolish Americans do not cease to be foolish in Europe, and wise ones grow wiser! Everywhere at lashionable places one sees overdered places one sees overdressed, loud-talking and laughing young people, that one is not proud to own his countrymen and country-women. The latter have their train of fast young men who think in Europe they can do as they please, of young Saxon officers, who offer titles and birth for good American gold, and make themselves absurd and conspicuous, as just such people do at home. There are many who come for improve-gallery, and a letter from Dresden would be the play of Hamlet with Hamlet left out, without some description of it, and a dome and adorned with stone carvings. The interior is exceedingly handsome, with broad, stately staircases, doors of dark wood, beautifully carved with artistic designs, the painters' pallet and brushes, and sculptors, models and tools, gracefully grouped in the great rooms, one opening into the other where the pictures are, you quickly cease to notice the room and all but the pictures. Many of us have stood before "old masters" in America, with the dismal misglying that we had no artistic taste, for if that smoky, dark, ugly thing was an "old master." then we had not the soul of art within us, for, try as we might, no ray of beauty us, for, try as we might, no ray of beauty could we see there! The walls of all the European galleries are rich in just such be an artist, he need only be a man with period.

a soul within him, and he, too, will love the "old masters." There are people who can stand before Raphael's glorious "Madonna di San Sisto" and "see nothing in it," and there was a man once who could see nothing in "Niagara" but a gigantic water power-for sponging coats!
This world-famous picture is in a room by itself, (many a fine picture suffers from the want of such isolation,) and men tread softly and speak low, as in a temple, as they enter there, and well they may; for more than three hundred years has that sublime picture looked down in its beauty, gladdening the eyes and uplifting the hearts of men. It is that well known Madonna of

The wonderful, deep, divine look in the face of the child strikes you at once, while the full depth of expression in the mother is more subtle; its exquisite beauty is appreciated at once, but the fullness and elevation of expression grows upon you with every visit, and indeed cannot

This collection of pictures is not es-This collection of pictures is not especially rich in fine specimens of the Italian school. There are very few of Raphael's, few of Guido's, though those few are very fine; Guido ranking next to Raphael in my estimation, as a painter of the highest spiritual power. There are also one or two of Carlo Dolce's, beautiful in coloring and expression; but the main richness of the gallery is in its

Here is his famous portrait of himself and wife, and many beautiful portraits unequalled for richness and depth of coloring

It, is a most delightful sensation to walk down these long rooms and recognize, one after the other, famous pictures that one has known all one's life, from engravings. The number of small, exquisitely finished pictures by Teniers, Gerard Dow, Van Dyk and many other well known artists, is very great and day after day one can examine them with never failing pleasure.

Once a month a collection of miniatures is open to the public, which, though small, is exceedingly interesting. There are many portraits of sovereigns, many bridge. Time shaking his unheeded of them famous men and women, of whom you form new ideas or intensify old ones as you study their faces. Mary Queen of Scots is there with her lovely face; Catherine, of Russia; Maria Theresa and many a king and hero, from Charlemagne to Napoleon.

But nothing is so unsatisfactory as for its music as its pictures—instrumental music principally. There is an excellent opera every night, with very fair voices and more than usually good choruses and remarkably fine scenery and costumes. Classical concerts are given three and four times a week, and, above all, the cheap concert saloons are never failing sources of delight to all music lovers. There, for about seven cents entrance fee, you can hear first class orchestral music, a fine band of from twenty to forty per-formers, splendidly drilled, and many of whole evening as they sip and listen, and talk between times. Such a sociable and talk between times. Such a sociable people as they are, talking incessantly and most volubly, yet never in loud or rude tones; and, what looks strange to an American, not often in a mixed circle of ladies and gentlemen, the ladies genological strange of ladies and gentlemen and strange of ladies and gentlemen and most volubly, yet never in loud or rude tones; and, what looks strange to gentlemen and strange of ladies and gentlemen and strange of ladies and gentlemen and ting; the gentlemen congregating around other tables, with only occasionally a husband or brother included in the femi-

ECONOMY BUTTER CO. ask the attention of all interested in the reduction of the extravagant cost of Butter, to their practical and economical system of making pure prime Butter by the aid of the EXTRACT OF BUTTER PLANT.

A brief allusion to the origin of this important discovery may not prove uninteresting. Among the authenticated records of the renowned Captain Cook's voyage around the world, is found J. Y. MOLAUGHLIN, Agent, the statement, that while solourning for a short time on the Brazilian Coast of South America, he time on the Brazulah Coast of South America, he observed the natives using, in the preparation of their food, a beculiar oil, which, upon examination, he found to possess the appearance, taste and flavor of Rutter inputs how. and flavor of Butter; upon further inquiry, however, he ascertained that it was simply a substance that the natives distilled in a crude and imperfect manner, from a rich and luxuriant lant that grew si that warm tropical country. A few jears ago, an eminent French chemist, while on a profes sional visit to the tropics, made numerous experiments with this remarkable production of nature, and succeeded in extracting a concentrated essence of the plant. The formula for its preparation, and the Sole Right for its sale in this country are the exclusive property of this Com-pany, by whom it was purchased from the origipany, by whom it was purchased from the origi-nal discoverer. We claim for this remarkable, yet simple and perfectly harmless preparation— Its.—That by its use a net gain of from 50 to 260 per cent. is made in the manufacture of Butter. per cent. is made in the manufacture of Batter.
2d. That Butter, which from age or whatever cause, may be strong, rancid, streaked or coarse-grained, and comparatively useless for general use, by the aid of this Extract, is restored to its original freshness and sweetness, fine-grain, and even color. 3d.-By the use of this Extract, one pound of delicious, fresh Butter is actually made from one pint of milk.

4th.—That a pure and excellent table Butter can be made, at a cost of from 15 to 20 c ats per pound. The chief expense wherein being Butter, which is the essential base.

5th.—That Butter manufactured by the aid of this Extract is equallin every respect to the best Butter made by the ordinary method. ith.-The Extract after thorough analysis, by able chemists, is pronounced perfectly free from any deleterious substance, the ingredients being purely of a vegetable nature.

Sth.—In proof of the foregoing assertions, the Ractory of this company is maxing one ton of Butter per day, which meets with ready sale in the New York Mirket, and is consumed from the tables of the first Hotels, Restaurants and Private families in this city and elsewhere. sample package of the Extract (sufficient to nake 50 lbs. of Butter) with full directions for
