A Modern Romance. One of those events which occasionally transpire to assert, in the most emphatic Havana, on Saturday, on a charge of theft, proved to be a Cuban rebel. He was tried and sentenced to death by e manner, the leveling spirit of the age, court martial and shot at aix o'clock tha same evening. Captain General Dulce, vesterday, is-sued a proclamation, addressed to the citizens of Havana, in which he refers to Bourbon to the daughter of a Cuban merchant. The story-a most romantic one --is as follows: Some three or four the events of the day before. He says his promises of maintaining order and justice have been observed. The man years ago Mrs. Hamil, the wife of a well known merchant in Havana, left that city justice have been observed. The man who had just been executed was proba-bly instigated by others to create a dis-turbance, and it was necessary to act in his case with exemplary severity. At this very moment the government was lenlently sending out of the country more astute but equally culpable men. The proclamation concludes with a flat-tarior address to the voluntaers. to place her daughter in a school in Paris.
