He

When I first went to business at Pittsburgh, in 1811, our principle supplies of cotton goods were from England. The coarse muslins were made in India, and furnished through the East India Com-pany. They were sold cheap, but were of poor quality, and invoiced under the Hindoo names of Baftahs, Sannahs, Mow-sannahs, Humhums, Jallipores, &c. &c. The prices ranged from 25 to 40 cents a yard, and higher during the war. In 1810 there were but fifteen cotton factories in the United States, and the cotton crop was only 212,000 bales. Fity years later this crop was 4,670,000 bales; cotton factories had been erected all over the Union, and sheetings sold at 8 cents a yard that would have readily brought 75 cents during the war or previous, but they could not then be made.

For many years past we have exported cotton goods to India and China at a profit. What a triumph for American During the war with England cotton factories multiplied rapidly. The shipping interest of New England was badly cut up, and the energies of its industrious people were directed to manufacturing; we soon began to receive in the West-supplies of "domestic" cotton goods, as they were then called, comprising ticking, drilling, shirting, sheeting and checks, of various qualities and prices. Bed ticking seventy-five to ninety centsa yard, shirtings fifty to seventy-five cents, &c. After the peace of 1815, of course prices declined; but as late as 1817, upon referring to our invoices, I find "domestic shirting" charged at thirty to fifty cents; calicoes, thirty to thirty five cents for the best, by wholesale, in Philadel-phia. East India muslins had also de-clined. Baftas, twenty-seven cents, Sannahs, twenty-one cents, and Jallipores twenty-one cents per yard. Add to the above rates the difference of exchange, three to five per cent.; hauling over the mountains, seven or eight cents a pound; with the profit of the retail merhant, and some idea may be formed of the cost to the Western consumer.

family wants required.

Flax linen—600 to 700—bleached, was worth 60 to 75 cents a yard. Tow linen, violated Constitution. Corgress, he said, unbleached 15 to 20 cents. Linsey, 75 to 87 cents, and coarse country flannel $1 00 a yard. Within ten years later, prices declined one-third from these rates. As declined one-third from these rates. As cotton goods became cheaper, and the products of the farms brought better prices, the cultivation of flax was neglected, or rather gave way to more profit-the cotton factories. This has been a wonderful relief to the females of our agriculturists, for few can imagine the toil in making linen garments in the "good old times," as we fondly call them. The flex had to be pulled at maturity, spread, rotted, broken, scutched, hackled, spun, wove, and the web bleached before it was ready for the shears and needle: and in each process-except breaking and scutching—the women took the principal labor. No wonder the old drudgery in her "Song of the Shirt" a specimen:

and Series and the

And that was at the beginning o' it."

For many years past flax has only been grown in the West for the seed to supply the linseed oil mills. The lint was not raised until latterly. It is now cut by the mowing machine-dressed by machinery, and made into bagging and bale rope for baling cotton—a pretty good substitute for hemp. Some of the tow is used to mix with cotton in making colored wadding. Many experiments have been ingenious machinery to shorten the fiber, bleach it, and make what has been termed "flax cotton," but it is not adhesive enough to be spun by any spindles retinvented. Nor would it be profitable when cotton is cheap.

The conversion of wool into domestic clothing was not so laborious to the female portion of the household as flax. The shearing and washing, and some-times the weaving, was done by the men —the carding, spinning and dyeing by the women. The "big wheel" was a very efficient machine, and did its work. rapidly. This branch of home industry is still conducted to a large extent over the West. to make jeans and linseys, using cotton warp.

work on which the women are engaged is the turning and patting of the drying bricks, and this labor continues all the week without any intermission even on Sunday. The scanty dress of the female operatives, the evil associations, and the clay plentifully bespattered on their persons, it is stated, render the position of these women as degraded as it possibly can be. Certainly something should be done by the English Parliament to pre-vent the female children from growing up into unsexed women.

THE New York Legislature is asked for a law authorizing the Eric Railway Company to consolidate with all the roads thas bought or leased, extending from New York to Chicago and Cincinnati, including 'the property of the Long Dock Company, the Patterson and Hudson River Railroad, the Patterson and Newmark Bailroad, and the Nothern Railroad mapo Railroad, the Fatterson and New-ark Railroad, and the Northern Railroad in the State of New Jersey; the New York and Newburgh Railroad, the Buf-falo, New York and Erie Railroad, the Rochester and Genesee Valley Railroad, and the Chemung Railroad in the State of New York: the Hayley Branch Railof New York; the Hawley Branch Rail-road, the Jefferson Railroad, the Buffalo, Bradford and Pittsburgh Railroad in the State of Pennsylvania; the Atlantic and Great Western Railroad, extending from Salamanca, in the State of New York, through the States of Pennsylvania and Ohio, to Cleveland and Dayton in the last named State; the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton Railroad in the State of Ohio; and a contemplated line of railroad between West Salem and Toledo, also in the State of Ohio, and thence to Chicago, in the State of Illinois."

Ex-President Johnson reached his the cost to the Western consumer. At that period, however, the farmers bought but little in the way of cotton goods, except calicoes; they preferred to make their own clothing at home from flax and wool. Those were the palmy days of the spinning wheel and its cheerful music was heard in every house. Country flax and tow linen, linseys, flannels, and coarse woolen cloth was the product of almost every farm house, and the surplus not wanted at home was bar. the surplus not wanted at home was bar-tered at the stores for such goods as the the Constitution. The substance of his Baltimore speech and of his fareproducts of the farms brought better prices, the cultivation of flax was negiceted, or rather gave way to more profitable crops, and the domestic spinning wheels were silenced by the machinery of the cultivations factories.

His grandfather, who is a Republican, promised him a pony and carriage if he would desert his colors and declare himself a Republican. The next morning at breakfast Freddy looked very Scotch woman complained of this grave and was uncommunicative. After a brief meal he arose and went into the *hundred years before Hood's famous song kitchen, where Bridget was at work was written. One verse may serve as a Resting his head upon his hands, he indulged in deep meditation for a moment dulged in deep meditation for a moment; then suddenly looking up he asked: "Bridget, do you know what I am?" "No," said the girl. "Well, I will tell you," said he; "I am a carned old copperhead." "What?" said Bridget. "I tell you I am a darned old copperhead, "This work his work his work of the property." This the meanest kind of a Democrat.' settled the case, and Freddy clings to his party at the sacrifice of a pony and a carriage. THE New York Sun remarks: "Some benevolent but weak minded people are pressing Congress to enact that female employes of the Government shall be paid the same wages as is paid to males for the same kind of work. At first sight this seems a very reasonable request, but it must be remembered that Congress, like all the other agents of the nation, is un-der a moral obligation to get the nation's der a moral obligation to get the nation's work done at the lowest market rate of compensation; and if the rate of women's labor is less than it is for men's, all paid beyond it is so much given away for nothing. We had better get rid of our debts before we begin to make presents either to women or men out of the people's money."

EXTRACT OF BUTTER PLANT.

A brief allusion to the origin of this important overy may not prove uninteresting. Among the authenticated records of the renowned Captain Cook's voyage around the world, is found the statement, that while sojourning for a thort time on the Brazilian Coast of South America, he observed the natives using, in the preparation of their food, a peculiar oil, which, upon examination, he found to possess the appearance, taste and flavor of Butter; upon further inquiry, how-ever, he ascertained that it was simply a substance that the natives distilled in a crude and imperfect manner, from a rich and luxuriant plant that grew spontaneously and abundantly in that warm tropical country. A few jenes an eminent French chemist, while on a pr essional visit to the tropics, made numerous exper-iments with this remarkable production of naure, and succeeded in extracting a concentrated escence of the plant. The formula for its preparation, and the Sole Right for its sale in this country are the exclusive property of this Com-pany, by whom it was purchased from the original discoverer.
