THE LAST PHILADELPHIA HOR.

a mother and her two children, by the all rights and authority of a full board. husband and father, and the subsequent suicide by drowning of the latter, at Philadelphia. By mail we have the following Darticulars:

The name of the murderer and suicide was James L. Blackstone, of the firm of Funston & Blackstone, picture-frame manufacturers, on Market street above Ninth. The family resided in the northwestern part of the city. The first intimation of the murder was the receipt of a dispatch Tuesday morning by Mr. Fon-ston from a relative of Blackstone, to whom the murderer communicated the crime by mall, immediately after its perpetration. The house was immediately risited by Mr. Funston, who, with the aid of police, forced an entrance, and discovered on the kitchen floor the three bodies horribly mutilated and covered with The floor and every article of furniture in the room was completely saturated. So great was the quantity on the floor that the flend had placed a roll of muslin at the door to prevent the blood from running into the yard. The scene presented was one of the most horrible type, and only equaled by the unparal-le ed butchery of the Deering family, by Probst, a few years ago.

An examination of the body of Mrs. Blackstone disclosed the fact that the wounds were made by an axe. On the face was a frightful gash, severing the root of the tongue and jaw bone. The throat was cut through to the spinal column. On other parts of the head were a number of contused, wounds evidently made by the blunt part of the axe. The body of the little girl was next examined. The head was crushed to a jelly, the brains protruding at different places. The child had apparently received two or three blows of the blunt part of the instrument. The head of the boy was also crushed in. and bore the marks of several blows of the sharp part of the axe. The head was nearly severed by a gash on the neck. The other portions of the bodies bore no marks of violence. It is supposed the family had just arisen, as the children were in their night clothes. The tragedy took place about six o'clock on Sunday morning, as the neighbors heard talking in the kitchen about that time.

Blackstone was a temperate man, and with his family attended church nearly every Sunday.

After the deed he visited a real estate broker and made an arrangement of some property and then walked towards the river, but before reaching it he was arresriver, but before reaching it he was after-ted by a Justice, who, from his singular actions, supposed him to be insane. He, however, broke away, and, on reaching the Chestnut street wharf, pulled off his coat and hat, and throwing them away, immediately plunged into the river. A handkerchief on which was his name was found in his pocket. This fact, together with the writing of the letter to his father-in-law, informing him of the murder, goes to refute the theory of his being in-

Blackstone was thirty-seven years of age and his wife thirty four. They had been married twelve years, during which time they have, as far as is known, lived happily. The boy was eight and the girl happily. The boy was eight and the girl three years of age. Depression of spirits, caused by disappointment in money matters, was the probable cause of the terrible deed. Mrs. Blackstone has been beard to state that her husband inherited three years of age. Depression of spirits, caused by disappointment in money matters, was the probable cause of the terrible dood. Mrs. Blackstone has been insanity.

There were in favor of the Senate office tenure bill, on Friday, seventy Republicans. A change of from twelve to fifteen votes will secure a concurrence, and end the controversy, which is becoming a serious annoyance to the members of both Houses, all of whom are anxious to secure the removal of various office holders, which cannot be done while this bill remains in force, and nearly all are anxious for an adjournment, that they may return to their homes.

The appointments for the leading foreign missions do not yet appear to have been settled. Mr. Andrew J.
