The Hungarian elections show a large increase in the strength of the "extreme left"—the radical party of that important section of the Austrian Empire.

THIS DAY has been fixed for the adjournment of Congress. The event will be likely to depend on the agreement of the two Houses in the matter of Southern reconstruction. THE CONTESTED election in HIId Penna.

An extra session of the Senate is called for next week. This is customary with the incoming of a new Administration. The session will be wholly occupied by the Executive nominations, and in the consideration of pending treaties.

MR. MORTON'S proposition to require the ratification of the XVth Article as an additional condition precedent to the admission of Virginia, Texas and Mississippi, secured a large affirmative vote in the Senate, and the House promptly adopted the amendment. The bill, therefore, with that important provision, awaits but the signature of the President to be come a law.

HABTFORD, Conn., returns the annual taxable incomes of five manufacturing companies, twelve mercantile firms, and forty-five individuals, all ranging above $100,000 and up to $1,692,000, showing an aggregate of $12,404,919, and an average of over $200,000 each. This shows a wonderful accumulation of capital in a small city, and proves that Yankee notions pay,

IT IS REPORTED that FRANK BLAIR goes fillibustering to Cuba. Have we done injustice to that great chieftain? Was it, after all, Cuba which the BRODHEAD letter contemplated the reconstruction of, by military power? The affair certainly looks that way, now. Why couldn't General BLAIR have been less enigmatical, thereby escaping, perhaps, the slight misunderstanding of November 3d?

THE State Guard suggests that the new law, commuting the death penalty, was passed for the especial benefit of the murderers, Earon and Twitchell, and objects, therefore, that it is ex post facto legislation, which might substitute another penalty for that to which their conviction gether dependent upon the mercy and the subjected the criminals. THE Governor has vetoed the bill recently passed by the Legislature, providing for the commutation of the death penalty to imprisonment. It will hardly pass over his signature, as it seems that Pennsylvania is not yet quite ready for reform in that direction. The commutation act clothed the Chief Executive with extraordinary powers, and was favorably received by those opposed to capital punishment more because it was a step towards its entire abandonment rather than the exact legislation required.

The worst removal Grant—or Boutwell—has yet made, it strikes us, is that of Assessor Webster, of New York. * * * But, in obedience to the money ring, to the aristocratic brokers of New York, this faithful and fearful officer has been sacrificed. It is faarful to know that sacrificed. It is fearful to know that sacrinced. It is learned to know that there is a power in the land which can compel those high in authority to remove an officer who is honestly doing his duty as his oath demands.—State

We quote the above paragraph from a ournal which has hitherto acted with the Republican party. Its present acceptance of the peculiar Democratic idea that none but Democrats can be "faithful and fearless officers," and its horror in the fearful knowledge of some mysterious and reprehensible power behind the President's chair, might lead unreflecting people to believe that the country is going to the bad. Are things really so dreadful?

WHEN THE GLADSTONE MINISTRY assumed the English government in November, it was understood that its first "budget" would show a diminution of at least £2,000,000, in the appropriations to be asked for from the new Parliament. This expectation is more than realized in the estimates which were submitted to the Commons on Wednesday. The naval and military expenditures are to be cut down by fully £2,700,000, while the present sources of revenue, unchanged, will yield £500,000 of an increase. But there remain £4,000,000 of the Abysinian war expenses to pay, which will consume all of the anticipated surplus. Recordance with popular sentiment, the absolute reduction of the revenue, to correspond with the diminished needs of the future, must be postponed to another year. that the concurrence of two great nations, the same policy of reducing their naval and military establishments, is a significant mark of the confidence, equally shared by both Governments, in an harmonious and pacific solution of all the great fact—that liberty and humanquestions at present in controversy be. ity are equivalent terms: that those

FATHER DE SMET.

The incompetency of the Indians, to make any binding contracts whatever, is distinctly declared by the late action of Congress. All the treaties of the past two years are abrogated, every mutual engagement is repudiated, and there exists to-day, so far as concerns the Congresional action, not the slightest scintilla of an agreement of any sort, or to any end, with the Indian tribes. They are hence. forth to be held as an inferior race, altocharity of our Government. This is an more, nothing less. He is to have the undertakings toward the tribes; it is a

DE SMET, by a long course of own Administration: faithful personal labor, of devoted piety, and of the most exemplary selfdenial,-under exposures and privations singularly resembling those endured in the earliest centuries by the soldiers of the Cross,—has won the confidence of these savages to a degree far beyond anything achieved by any other white man whose feet have ever trodden those barbarous plains. This courageous and faithful missionary enjoys some repose, in revisiting his native land, but his heart is still with the red men whom he loves, and for whom he has given all the years of a long life, and he will soon return, to resume the work which has already made the name of DE SMET a talisman of peace, and not seldom of Christianity, from the Colorado to the Great Lakes. He and such as he, of whatever creed, if they can be found, are the men to whom the President should look for counsel and co-operation, in the discharge of those responsibilities which

The standard of American Liberty goes on, streaming in the front of the massed columns of an intelligent and Christian people. Many mere politicians are plundering upon the flanks, or loitering in the rear of the march; these neither aid nor retard the movement, nor do they comprehend its real significance. To them, t means place and personal profit; to the grand army of the people, it means the irresistible vindication of the one vital principle—as deep and as broad as the foundations of Heavenly Justice—which underlies all that is worth having, or worth preserving, of our republican insti-

JOHN BRIGHT, not many years since, drew a word-picture of the future of the Great Republic, which we reproduce as follows:

I have another and brighter vision before my gaze. It may be a vision, but I will cherish it. I see one vast confederation stretching from the frozen North in unbroken line to the glowing South, and from the wild billows of the Atlantic westward to the calmer waters of the Pacific main; and I see one people, and one language, and one faith, and over all that widecontinent the home of freedom for the oppressed of every race and of every clime.

OPERA HOUSE.—Never have we seen a more brilliant or larger assemblage drawn together at this first-class temple of the drama, than was in attendance last night on the occasion of Miss Augusta L. Dargon's benefit. It was a hearty and spontaneous ovation to genius and ability, and reflected the high measure of appreclation in which the leading lady of the Opera House is held by the best class of our amusement patrons. During the evening she was presented with an elaborate floral offering, in the shape of a basket of fresh cut flowers artistically arranged. Mr. Caldwell, editor of the Mail, made the presentation speech, on behalf of many friends and admirers, in a brief, dignified and well worded address. The recipient responded in a very neat speech, in which, after expressing thanks to the doners and audience, and ning's universal kind treatment, cour-tesy and marked generosity during her tesy and marked generosity during her engagement at the Opera House, she announced that three weeks hence she would quit the boards here for a new field, but she would always gratefully remember Pittsburgh and the people.
