Although the Missouri is by far the greater stream, yet it looks to one viewing the whole surrounding scene as if it emptied its floods into the Kansas, rather than the Kansas into it; for the straight, peculiar and strongly defined valley of the latter keeps on eastward, after receiving its mighty affluent, just as it did before. Standing on the bluff on which this city is built, looking northward, we see the Missouri for a distance of fifteen miles; looking westward we see the Kansas which is another Mig. we see the Kansas, which is another Missouri in miniature, coming down from the west; looking eastward we see, for six

They are about the width of your Wood street. By so doing they not only saved ground, but expense in grading and paving. In Lawrence and Topeka the streets are so wide that the people have not yet been able to macadamize them. Judging from the manner and rate at which the work of grading and paving is going on, a stranger would infer, as I do, that the public exchequer is a fat one. Taxes must be high; but as everybody seems determined that this shall be the great city of this greatest body of first rate arable land to be found in the temperate zone there. ate zone, there are probably but few The business transacted here is already

This bluff is more than a hundred feet above the river, bounded on the north by an extensive low plain through which the Kansas flows, and on the north by an extensive low plain through which the Kansas flows, and which is sometimes overflowed by the floods of the Missouri. On the top of this bluff, which stretches off sonthward and eastward on the general level of the country, the city is located. For more than a mile back from the brow which overlooks the river, the ground is broken by more ravines and hillocks than a span there is probably not a single reach of one square in length where a street rum over the original level of the ground is broken by more ravines and filling are not to be found in any other city I have ever seen; for the streets are well graded, and whether the cut on the hill be six feetor sixty, the grade is rigidly adhered to. In some places we walk between twe all most perpendicular walks of mark as high as ordinary city houses; but, for the most part, these elevated lots have been cut down, and carted on others which are as much depressed below the grade, and then blooks of four-story stores stand with a same area. In all that of the side walks thirty-five feet sur of brick, and so close together that an active man might almost jump from the top of one to the top of the other.

It is a peculiar property of this earthor marl, as Dr. Hayden, the Geologist employed by the Gevernment in this Western region, pronounces it to behat it can be cut down to any depth almost perpendicularly, and in that position stand for years with very little crumbling. This city is full of such banks, or rather walls. In their faces, iks, or rather walls. In their faces, man, prior to his death, requested that saw myself, a yoke of oxen can draw a plow through it turning a heavy furrow. Some ides of the magnitude of the business done in the State of Ohio by insurance companies incorporated by other States, may be derived from the information collected by the Auditor of that State. and soon to appear in his annual report showing that the aggregate amount of property insured in Ohio by foreign companies, in 1868, was $127,032,122 46; that the premiums received upon the same amounted to $1,658,258 95, and that the losses paid upon the same amounted to $710,185 08, showing a gain on the husiness in this State of $985,120 91, or about fifty-seven per cent. on the amount of premiums received. This fact should arouse the attention of our own under-writers to renewed exertions to more fully compete with those engaged in the same line of business from other States.
