METHODISTS IN COUNCIL.

Immense Gathering of Methodists—The Question of Lay Delegation Discussed Bishops Simpson and Kingsley on the Stand-What is Proposed, &c. For a number of years the question of Lay Delegation has been the fruitful theme of discussion and agitation in the Methodist Episcopal Church. 'As the organization at present is constituted the regular ministers are the governing power, they as a body administering its ordinances, forming its laws, and in all things practically and theoretically con-

As an outgrowth, however, of its rapid progress and vastly increased power, the question of admitting into its councils representatives from the laity or members of the church, without orders, sprang up, and steadily gained in importance and interest until in 1860 the Ganaral Conference directed that the General Conference directed that the matter should be submitted to the people interested, for them to say whether or not a change of ad-ministration was desirable. The result was decidedly opposed to any change, but the vote taken was very light, and was said by the friends of the ovement not to be a fair representation of the people. The matter thus rested with more or less sgitation until 1868, when a pressure was again brought te when a pressure was again prougnt to bear upon the General Conference, re-sulting in the preparation of a plan for the change, which is to be submitted to a vote of the church membership during the month of June in the present year. As the time is rapidly approaching when the question will have to be decided, it was deemed desirable by the friends of the measure in this vicinity to have the matter once more thoroughly impressed upon the attention of the people, and for this purpose a public meeting of all interested, both opponents and friends, was called for last evening, in the Smithfield M. E. Church, arrangements having been prayingly made for ments having been previously made for the attendance of able speakers to discuss and explain the movement.

In pursuance of this announcement, at the appointed hour, seven and a half o'clock, the church auditorium in which the meeting was held, was densely packed with an audience representing every charge in the vicinity, and of manyat a distance, so that before the meeting was opened every available inch of space in the news, aisles, gallery, and upper vestibule

Mr. H. T. Coffey stated that a number of laymen in the city had organized a Society for the advancement of the cause of Lay Delegation, and invited represen-tatives from all the churches in sympathy with the movement to join the organ. zation by sending their addresses to the Secretary, Rev. W. H. Kincaid. The Chairman then spoke briefly in speak further in regard to it, but as the General Conference had again submitted it to the people, and the present decision would likely be final and settle the vexed question, at the earnest solicitation of friends he had consented to again express his sentiments and urge upon them the great importance of the subject. In approaching the question he said he discovered in the plan proposed to vete, and the great importance of the subject. In approaching the question he said he thought it was well first to understand exactly what was meant by it, and in pursuance of this idea he dwelt at considerable length and with much force and clearness, explanatory of the proposed change, which he contended was not a change in the ministry so as to weaken their power or interfere with their work, but was slimply to introduce a new power into the church, and thus add to the active, vital working force in the administration of the church gov-ernment. Such being the change then, the simple question then resolved itself into that of the expediency or feasibility into that of the expediency or feasibility of the proposed plan, and upon the friends of Lay Delegation rested the duty of proving the case in this manner.

In considering the case then from this standpoint, he laid down the proposition, that the whole body of the Church ought to have a voice in making its laws or in changing its economy. In support of this proposition he adduced the argument that it was so in the State and should be so in the Church. As to the ob-rested in its membership as well as its ministers, was one which received the sanction of all the great reformers in the ast. The Augsburg confession clearly past. The Augsburg confession clearly demonstrated it, and Luther himself, constativy reiterated and seemed to love to dwell upon it. The call to the ministry did not impart the right to govern as a consequence, else the Methodist Church herself, in her past history had made a dreadful mistake in shutting out from her councils those who had been called to labor in home fields and not in talled to labor in home fields and not in the itineracy. The speaker spoke some-time in regard to this point, bringing forward Scripture, history and illustra-tions to prove the truth of his assertions. The Speaker then took up several objections, which had been made against the change, prominent among which he characterized the saying that the change was a revelutionary measure. He could not conceive the propriety of applying such a term to a movement like this. Often the State, by specified plans, and in accordance with the established law, changed the affairs of the government, and yet, as it was properly done, who could style it as a revolution. So in this matter the change was to be made in a proper manner and in strict accordance with the laws and regulations laid down by even the present ruling powers. Another objection was that it was a radical change. How was this?

District Court—Judges Hampton and Kirkpatrick. There was no change in the stewards, class leaders, Sunday Schools, &c., the only exception being that once in four years laymen were represented in the General Conference of the Church, and each Aunual Conference had its representation slightly increased from the same source. The local Church, howevr, remained emphatically the same and ad just the same government in its affairs. Was this a radical change?

Still another objection was that the General Conference would be encumbered by such a large representation. The fallacy of this argument could be seen in the examples of other churches, which had equally as large representations as this change proposed, and yet they had been found to move harmoniously. Why could not the same be said of the Methodist Church? As to the financial objection which had lately been very much talked about, that was somewhat overreted. He then showed by what overrated. He then showed by calculation that the actual expense in this direction would be about one-half cent in every four years for every member of the church. This had been used as an argument, but when thoroughly examined was of small account. Still another objected, that ambitious, rich, ungodly men, by this plan, would have themselves made the representatives of the people, by their superior influence. If this were true, then, indeed, Methodism had little to glorify herself for the work of the last hundred years. But this argument fell to the ground when it was remembered that not the body of the people directly, but the leaders, the stewards, the tried new of the Quarterly Conference choose the delegates. These same quarterly conferences which had ele vaied to their positions every minister in the land. And shall it be said that this Conference cannot say who shall assist its chosen ministers in the management of the church? How could such an argument stand in the face of the history of the past? But again it was said, "Let delegation was simply the entering wedge for other great changes. And why was this argument used? Was it not from a lingering fear in the hearts of those who presented it that the change would work so well that other changes those who presented it that the change would work so well that other changes would be tried, and ultimately the whole discipline of the church would be change ed. But this argument was also without force. With lay delegation, changes in the church would be found to be much more difficult than it was even at premore difficult than it was even at present, as instances in the history of the past had amply proven. Among the specific reasons on the other side of the question was that it would prevent hasty egislation. Look at the records of our sister organizations, the Presbyterians and others, who have practically the same plan, and how has legislation within their borders been carried on? Could the charge of hasty legislation be laid at their doors? Another argument in its favor was found in the fact that it was demanded by the spirit of the age. How was it in our national affairs? Had our country not The Chairman then spoke briefly in relation to the object of the meeting, and introduced as the first speaker the REV. BISHEP SIMPSON.

The speaker, in commencing his remarks, stated that his opinions on the question had been so often and freely expressed that he had concluded not to speak further in regard to it, but as the is a magic to every one in the feeling that he is engaged in a work, if it were > not prevent those by whom the result was brought about from mu muring, and that being not accustomed to the study of questions of such a character, they would feel no interest in it whatever and consequently the whole affair would be really no fair representation of the church. In refuting this argument the speaker contended earnestly for female suffrage, and thought the ballot in all important matters in the hand of woman of as much, and oftentimes very much greater, value than that of many who had the privilege of this ines-timable right. He paid a touching and beautiful tribute to the noble actions of the women of the land during the late unhappy strife, and held it up as an an-successful. And if unsuccessful will in unhappy strile, and neight up as an answerable argument against the fallacy of supposing they had no interest in the great public questions, either in the church or State.

After speaking for more than an hour with unusual earnestness, the Bishop finally brought his remarks to a close, in properties full of forces and heapty, with peroration full of force and heauty, with reference to the position and and the fu-ture glory of the church when the new, upon it. I don't mean to tell you how to vote, but I know how I'd vote if I had the chance. I'd put it in for lay delega-tion. (Laughter.) That's how I'd vote if I were a man, and if I were a woman, well. I don't know how I'd do then, but seems to me my opinion would the same. (Renewed laughter.) In former times Lay Delegation was entirely out of the question. Then a Methodist Preacher riding through your woods and over your mountains, times was everything in the Church government from preacher to janitor. (Laughter.) But now the times have changed and the church has changed somewhat also. We must keep abreast of the times if we wish our beloved Zion to prosper, and do good. Let us all then be honest and courteous in this matter, and endeavor, in a christian spirit, to perform the duty assigned us.

Following Bishop Kingsley's remarks, on motion of Mr. D. Z. Brickell, a vote of thanks was tendered both speakers for their instruction and contental in the content of the c their instructive and entertaining remarks, after which the audience joined in singing the Doxology, and were dismissed by Bishop Kingsley with the ben-

SYNODICAL PROCEEDINGS.

General Synod of the Reformed Presbyterian Church at Cedarville, Ohio. THIRD DAY-AFTERNOON SESSION. Synod resumed business at 3 o'clock and was opened with prayer by the Moderator. Rev. John Douglas, D.D., reported that ne had attended, as the delegate of Synod, the General Assembly of the United Presbyterian Church, which met in Argyle, New York, last year, and was received with the greatest cordiality. The report was accepted and ordered to be printed in the minutes.

Dr. McMaster presented the report of the Committee on Union. It recommended the continuance of negotiations un-til the United and Reformed Presbyterian Churches, which beld so much in common, shall be united in one. Dr. McMaster supported the report in a speech of some length. He believed that the Testimonies of both churches should be placed on the same footing. He did think there was something in a name, but the name should not be a barrier in the way of Union, if the Testimo ny receives equal honor with that of the Testimony of the United Presbyterian Church.

Rev. S. Young was in favor of Union,

Rev. S. Young was in favor of Union, but not of absorption. There was no concession made to them by United Presbyterians in the basis presented. He believed the Reformed Presbyterian Church might make progress yet.

Dr. Wilson gave a history of the Conventions of the Reformed churches. He would not give up the name for Union.

He would not cut the tle that bound him.
Dr. Bratton wished to know what effect the rejection or adoption of the report would have. He thought the matter should be sent down to the people, that it may be known what their desire is. The fellowing committee was ap-pointed to investigate the matters connected with the Second church, Phila-delphia: Revs. Dr. Crawford, J. Alford, W. S. Bratton, J. F. Morton, S. Young and A Thomson.
Synod then adjourned, Rev. A. G

Chief of Police Bowden arrested, in the Allegheny Market house, three Italians. man, woman and boy, suspected of "shoving" conterfeit money. For some time past the market folks have been imposed upon with spurious currency, generally fifty cent notes, and the police have been on the lookout for the parties engaged in the business. Suspicion finally attached to the three persons named, and while the woman was pur-chasins some garden seeds at a stand in the market, she was arrested, as stated, together with the others who accompanied her. At the Mayor's office he gave his name as Kunyu, and said the woman was his wife and the boy his brother. The counterfeit fifty cent notes were found in the man's possession. The boy also had a lot of money of the same denomination, but it was not ascertained to be spurious. Kunyu's house, on Virgin alley, this city, was searched, but nothing revealed to further strengthen the suspicions entertained. Several victimized persons have identified the wo nan as the person passing the money unon them. A hearing was had in the case yesterday morning before Commissioner Gamble, when the man was held in $2,000 bail, in default of which he was committed to jail. The woman was held in her own recognizance for trial, and the boy was discharged.
