FREEFORT, Pa., May 24, 1869. The country around Freeport, especially in the direction of Butler, is very hilly, there being scarcely any of what ago, by Mr. Ben Pitman, and a more ele-may be designated "level land." These gant work of phonography was probably hills are, however, mostly underlaid never issued. with a superior quality of "black dia-monds," which the projected railway will are long bring into market. The will, ere long, bring into market. The bridge across the Allegheny river during the coming summer and autumn, thus value of land has already materially ad- connecting with the Oil Creek and Allevanced in contemplation. The roads compare quite unfavorably with your Nicolson pavement on Fifth avenue and Wood street; the difference is at once discernible. I refer more particularly to the Freeport and Butler pike, which has been in an almost impassible condition since the late rains-nothing but rocks, ruts and mud-and I was not surprised to observe on a recent drive of Oil Creek and Allegheny River road. a few miles the wrecks of half a dozen vehicles and the remains of half that number of horses. Fence rails are nu-merous along the sides of the road, which have been used in assisting the stage and other vehicles out of holes. The houses are principally logs and mortar, one and a haff stories high; a few are neat frames, none stone or brick. Perhaps I should here state that the worst nortion of the here state that the worst portion of the "pike" lies in Armstrong county, and that the authorities are about being sued for damages, a lady having had a limb broken by the overturning of her con-Monroeville, or "Muttontown," as the neighbors dub it, some three or four miles distant, is the identical village, so often described --a tavern stand, blocksmith show monow there or blacksmith shop, grocery store, school house, squire's office, shoemaker's shop and a score of frame and log dwelling and a score of frame and log dwenning induced of delegates and frames dependent nouses. The people are thrifty and con-tented, and evidently enjoy life quite as well as the residents of towns of larger pretentions. Sarversville, or "Slabtown," a couple of miles beyond, may be styled a "second edition" of the above named place, with this exception, that it has a first class dry goods and grocery store and three black. smith shops. This was as far as my drive extended. The spirit of improvement exhibited in these towns is not of a very demonstrative character-not so much so as is anticipated when the railroad shall have been completed-still I am told a
