A Most Startling Tragedy—Husband Killed by a Wife. At Rockford, Illinois, on Wednes-At Rockford, Illinois, on Wednesday, a woman named Dixon shot and killed her husband, Banks J. Dixon, under the following circumstances; Dixon and his wife had lived unhappily together for some time, when finally, from reat or imaginary causes, she left him, going to her father's house in the country. She returned a short time since, stopping at the house of a friend, and was confined the purpose, it is supposed, to gain possession of the child. It was finally arranged that he should visit her on a certain day, which was Wednesday. While in the chamber with his wife, and standing by the bedside with the babe in his arms, his back toward the bade in his arms, his back toward the bed, his wife, who had sp-peared perfectly calm, without emotion or excitement, suddenly rose, and draw-ing forth a concealed revolver fired two shots, one of which passed entirely

ary Meeting. Last night, at the Methodist Female College Chapel, Hancock street, now occupied as a place of worship by the St. Andrews' Episcopal Congregation, there was held a meeting of the American Protestant Episcopal Missionary Society. The attendance was small, not more than one hundred ladies and gentleman being present, but those who were there enjoyed a rare intellectual treat in the joyed a rare intellectual treat in the eloquent and forcible addresses delivered by distinguished strangers. The exercises were opened by an offering of the choir, after which the 104th hymn was rendered; all present joining in the vocal praise. An appeal to the Throne of Grace was made by Rey. Dr. John Preston, which was followed by another hymn. Rev. R. H. Newton, of Philadelphia, Secretary of the Protestant Episcopal Missionary Society, was then intropal Missionary Society, was then intro-duced to those present and delivered an able and argumentative address explan-atory of the objects of the Society. His remarks were controversial in their character, yet nest, dignified and forcible. He dwelled at considerable dength in making clear the right of members of the Episcopal church to enter into and aid this independent missionary auxiliary to the church, so needful especially at this time and in this land for spreading the Jospel of Christ, while Romanism was encroaching on the domain of the communion, and popular sentiment was drifting in the direction of that faith. By ingenious arguments he strove to prove the expediency of the organization, and disclaimed any idea of departing from the church in acting independent of the organizations of like character within her pale. The good the society will accomplish, the high object in view, and the capacity of all to help in the noble work were proall to help in the noble work, were pro-lific themes warmed into life by the earnest orator.

Rev. Dr. J. Cotten Smith, of New York, a member of the American Missionary Board, was next introduced and made a powerful address in favor of the Society and opposed to Romanism and the tendency to drift into its ranks observable in the High Churchmen and ritualists of the Episcopal Church. He was listened to with much attention, and his eloquent remarks made deep impression on his bearers.

After prayer and singing the meeting adjourned. Iron Clad Buildings.

It appears this sort of structure is prohibited by our city ordinances, and that the law is to be enforced against buildings already erected. It may be right to They have refused to represent Synod enforce the law generally and wrong to among the heathen. Can Synod do otherenforce the law generally and wrong to aforce it university. In other worth, it may be altogether proper to make excline to the opinion that in the case of the shop erected by Hussey, Wells & Co., appurtenant to their steel works, there is a strong claim upon the favorable consideration of Conneils. In reducing gots of steel to the particular sizes de-sired, trip hammers must be employed, the concussion of which is so grea as to shake the ground to a considerable distance around; from this cause and not to save expense, it has been found necessary to construct factories where such forces are employed, of heavy framework, covered on the sides and roof with iron, thus making them, as nearly as possible, proof against internal or external fires. Wooden roofs are not forbidden by law, and yet a brick house with a wooden roof is more liable to catch or transmit fire than would be a house with wooden walls and iron; slate or gravel roof. The iron-clad buildings, which have been doomed to be re-moved by law, are more nearly fire proof than thousands of shingle roofed buildings in the city. We see no objection to ironelads but their unsightly appearance, an objection that does not apply to manufacturing districts, where all the buildings are more or less unsightly. And, in the case of factories using trip-hammers, we suggest that the policy of the city should be to make concessions, on account of the mechanical necessities of the business. Hussey, Wells & Co. sities of the dusiness. Hussey, we have been ploneers in the manufacture of copper and steel at Pittsburgh. They have contributed largely to the representation abroad of this manufacturing centre. They have built up vast establishments, employ large numbers of skilled and common laborers. It is in such men and such enterprises that any city should take pride, and to such ever needful facility should be gladly accorded by the municipal authorities. And while it was doubtless wrong to erect the buildngs without authority of Councils, would it not be wrong also—if the necessity for them is made clear—to withhold the consent of Councils now, when they are built?
