THE Republicans of Maine hold their State Convention June 24th, to nominate a candidate for Governor. THE public waits, with some impatience, for the Commercial to specify the ring-politicians whom it has been vaguely denouncing of late. Names, neighbor, Onto has reduced the total of her funded debt, within twenty years, from some $23,000,000 to $10,000,000. Twentyfive years ago, her bonds were sold at market. The work of liquidation has been undertaken, and so far carried triumphantly through, under Whig and Republican auspices. For an alleged libellous publication copied, from a disreputable print in the interior of the State, by the Pittsburgh Commercial, and reflecting upon Hon. RUSSELL ERRETT, that gentleman has institute d proceedings, both civil and crim. inal, against the Commercial. If all reports be true, our neighbor is about to have still other invitations, to a careful study of the laws of this Commonwealth for the protection of individual reputations from indiscriminate assaults.

MR. ROBERT McKenzie, an extensive manufacturer from Scotland, is about to lead a large colony of his countrymen to Kansas, on the line of the Kansas Pacific Railway. He is now in that State looking out for a location and negotiating for land. THE LATE DR. JAMES RUSH, of Phildelphia, of a family distinguished in the revolutionary, diplomatic and scientific annals of this country, was himself a physician and author of the highest reputation. His work on the "Human Voice" is accepted, by the profession universally, as, upon that function being the most complete authority extant. Dying last week at the advanced age of eighty-four years, he left an immense estate, the bulk of which, comprising an entire block of ground on Broad and Christian streets. with nearly a million of dollars in other property, he has bequeathed to the Philadelphia Library Company. A magnificent structure is to be erected there, for the diffusion of popular knowledge, his will specifying many details for the building itself. This princely gift constitutes, next though not unexpectedly, passed from to that of his townsman GIRARD, the noblest endowment ever conferred upon any institution devoted to scientific and popular instruction in America.

THE In Memoriam proceedings of Saturday were creditable to the patriotism of our people, and gave a marked proof of their grateful sense of the services of the dead brave who, dying, saved their country's liberties, and vindicated the Gongiven rights of humanity. Our extended report, this morning, will afford to readers generally a very just idea of the enthusiastic accord with which all classes and ages united, to render the tribute of a loying memory to them who gave themselves a blood-offering for the redemption of the Republic. Withal, the impression generally obtains that the annually recurring occasion should not be observed with ceremonial demonstrations in any way kindred to those with which the country welcomes its national holyday, the Fourth of July. Somewhat less of pomp and circumstance, of gay music and of mere formalities, might safely be held neither to obscure the main idea, nor to diminish the touching warmth of the popular sentiment.

ELSEWHERE, we announce, so far as received, the result of the Republican primary meetings held on Saturday afternoon throughout the county. The elections appear to have been conducted everywhere in an orderly manner, and there was a very full vote polled. We do not know all the gentlemen whose names appear as delegates to the several conventions, but have personal acquainmajority of them, in whose wisdom, jus- news in the New York journals. tice and strict integrity we feel assured fided in the six hundred and forty-two represent them in these political councils, may be so carefully guarded as to preclude the faintest suspicion of a desire to citizen in the county.

> DEATH OF WM. BARKER, ESQ. To-day we announce the death of a friend, who for fully half a century has been a subscriber and reader of the GA-ZETTE, and who, during the same long period, has held high place amongst our most esteemed merchants, meriting the confidence, good will and respect of all with whom he came in contact, whether in social or business life. We refer to Mr. WILLIAM BARKER, who suddenly, earth to eternity yesterday morning, at his residence on Smithfield street. The deceased had attained the ripe old age of seventy-four years. He came to this city from England in 1818, and engaged extensively in wool dealing, a trade with which his name is intimately associated throughout the entire country. He retired from business in 1863, after amassing a comfortable fortune, and was succeeded by his nephew at the old stand. Kind hearted, good and charitable, an honest man in all his dealings, a consistent and zealous Christian, he carried with him to the grave a long life record pure and unsullied, and such as assures the hope that he closed his eyes in death to open them anew in an eternity of happiness.

THE GREAT TRUNK-RAILWAY. We print elsewhere such particulars, of the lease of the Fort Wayne line to the Pennsylvania Railroad, as have yet reached us. It is somewhat remarkable that the press of this city should have been entirely precluded from any reliable information, as to the progress and final consummation of a transaction in which our local interests are so deeply concerned. Although one of the corporations has maintained its principal office in this city, our journals have invariably first learned of any important developments in its current policy, through the press of New York and Philadelphia. We do not complain of this, but suggest it as explanatory of the occasional misanprehensions into which our newspapers have been led. Perhaps, after July, we tance with and knowledge of the great shall have less need for seeking home

While we swear our children upon them to eternal fealty to free institutions, equal rights, and equal powers of all men, we may not, as did the Carthagenian, swear eternal hatred to Rome. Yet we do remember that government whose ready aid, and perfidious aid, to rebellion in behalf of slavery, cost so much and so many who lie buried here. We will teach our children here, by these green mounds which cover their fathers' ashes, to enforce the lesson in the story of the ha-tred of the monarchy of republican insti-tutions, which sought to strangle this free government at its birth, hiring Hes-aian and savage warriors to fight government at its birth, hiring Hessian and savage warriors to fight the battles against our fathers in the war for independence. That government, which then failed to make slavery the rule on land, even against an infant republic, yet vaunting herself mistress of the sea, and through search in after years, tried but failed to make the years, tried but failed to make the ocean and those who go down to the seas her subjects. Let us tell our children, and call the spirits of the gallant dead who hover around us to bear us witness and impress the lesson, how, when slavery, her legacy to us as a nation, had caused treason and rebellion to raise their parricidal hands against the nation's life, and by its fieadish spirit to arm brother against brother, England, jealous of our prosperity, in rivalry of her commercial greatness, and in hatred of our freedom, when she could do so with safety to hercall the spirits of the gallant dead who when she could do so with safety to her-self, when she hoped we were in a death grapple with each other, let loose her steamers to destroy our ships, as she had sent barbarous Indians to burn the dwellings of our mothers and scalp them and their little ones. Supposed Suicide-A Touching Letter. At Chicago, about one o'clock Sunday morning, a lady's cloak was found lying on the wharf, and soon after a lady's hat was discovered floating in the river. In the pocket of the cloak were found several letters, two photographs, and a handkerchief, marked "Nellie E. Dorsett." These letters explained a story of love, elopement, desertion and death. The letters were written by a young man named Geo. H. Burr, a traveling agent for a New York drug house, to Nellie, and are marked by the usual characteristics of such letters. There was but one letter written by the girl, and this shows her determination to commit self-destruction. It is as follows: "Dear George: It is is not in anger I write to you now. I have no curses to heap upon you, but only love and forgiveness. Oh, George, if you had only known how fervently, passionately I love you, you would not have deserted me so cruelly. I left home, parents, everything for you, George, trusting to your love, for you did love me once. Oh, how my heart yearns for a return of its devotion. But I will not reproach you. Some two weeks since the Superintendent of Police of Chicago received a letter from M. M. Dorsett, 263 Broadway, New York, saying that his daughter Nellie had eloped with Burr and would probably come to that city. The river was dragged, but no body found.
