Cellars .- The cellar is a part of the house, and needs attending to as well as the kitchen or parlor and possibly more.

But it does not get it. Now and then there is a clean cellar; you meet it and you are surprised. It is a pleasure to be in such a cellar. But such cellars are rare; even a woman reputed neat is shy

Now the cellar with its odors is a breed-been said; but yet our cellars remain as they were. There is much sickness, especially in the spring; but people never think of their cellars, they do not lay it to the odors that are constantly emana-ting from them, and entering the rooms. There is little escape out door for the pes-tilent air before it first afflicts the family.

Here then is a malaria and a poison constantly entering the room where the family are, and into the other rooms till up into the garret where it is held. But the first attack, fresh from its haunt, is in the rooms occupied; and this is breathed all
