PENNSYLVANIA.

ELIZABETH has a velocipede school. The hotel at Cresson is open for the season. There is not a prisoner in the Warren city goal. The Little Spring hotel has been opened for the season. Some barbers have decided to keep their shops open on Sundays. The Catholics of Indiana are building a fine new brick church. The new hospital for the insane, at Danville, has been begun. A block of coal weighing three thousand pounds is on exhibition in Sharon. B. F. LYNN, the founder of the Erie Daily Dispatch, has again taken charge of it. They have been making for more than a week in the eastern part of the State. ALTOONA, with her half dozen caged incendiaries, is in a great state of excitement. Mr. JOHN WEAVER, an old merchant of Indiana, died last week, aged eighty-four years. One of our exchanges says that for the present at least the State Guard is a non est. Journal. Quite a number of sheep has recently been destroyed by wolves near Smethport, McKean county. ALTOONA Democrats instructed their delegates to the State Convention of that party to vote for Cass. A picnic at Corry, on Friday last, a lad was killed by falling from a swing. The fall broke his neck. The coming Fourth of July is to be celebrated with unusual attention this year in Olean, under the direction of the G. A. R. and the Good Templars. On last Saturday evening, a man named Michael Cassidy, fell from the bridge across the Shenango, at West Middlesex, and was instantly killed. The Mercer Dispatch says, from every appearance there will be a large crop of hay this year. The time for mowing is not far off. The grass fields never looked better than at present. JOHN AND HANNAH TAGGART celebrated their golden wedding, in Northumberland, on the 15th inst. The united ages of twenty guests present amounted to 1,500 years. The following pathetic verse is inscribed on a tombstone near Altoona: "Here lies my dear Mother, who lived 72 years, and died on the 15th of March, 1869. To die with another than live with father." The Carlisle Herald, in speaking of the Anderson troop, says: "Should their proposed re-union take place, we know the citizens of our borough will give the surviving members of the troop a hearty welcome." In Connersport the hotels have raised the price of board to five dollars per week, which has caused much dissatisfaction among the boarders, who threaten to leave if they have to pay more than four dollars per week. A FIRE in Mercer, on the 6th inst., destroyed Barne's livery stable and two small dwellings. Nine horses, three huggies and a quantity of hay and feed were destroyed with the stable. The whole loss was about $5,000, and there was no insurance. A LITTLE GIRL aged eight years, a daughter of Samuel Straley, residing near Mercersburg, Franklin county, was lost in the mountain near her home on the 20th ult., and, although diligent search was made by the whole community, so far no traces of her has been found. The child undoubtedly perished by starvation. A BOY committed a brutal act, as we learn, a few days since, in taking a cat which had displeased him in some way, forcing a tin tube down her throat, filling the tube with pepper, and then applied a match, and blowing the cat to atoms. Such brutality clearly indicates what the man will be. We did not learn the lad's name. — Williamsport Bulletin. The Meadville Republican says a sad accident occurred on Wednesday last, about four miles below Cochranstown, on the Franklin pike. A little boy, in trying to climb through a fence, lost his foothold and falling his head struck between two rails—and thus he hung till life was extinct. His mouth was pressed down so that he could make no cries, nor could he breathe through his nostrils, so that he was soon suffocated. Mrs. ROBERT STROXTON, of Cochranstown, died of apoplexy on Wednesday evening last. On Tuesday evening last she took her pail to the field to milk her cows, and not returning in due time, her husband went out to look for her. He found her lying on the ground insensible, with blood oozing from her mouth and nostrils. She was lying beside her half-filled pail, and probably received the "stroke" in the act of milking. She was about sixty-five years of age. — Meadville Republican. FATAL ACCIDENT.—The Conneautville Record says: A Hayfield correspondent sends the following: Mr. Wm. C. Morse, who lived with his son, Mr. Wm. V. Morse, of this township, was run over and instantly killed by the eight o'clock express train, near Cambridge, this county, on Wednesday. The deceased was about eighty-three years old, and occasionally subject to partial insanity, and on Wednesday last he took advantage of the absence of his son and went to the railroad. At the time of the accident he was sitting on the track, but was discovered too late to stop the train. The Eaton Free Press of the 17th inst. says: Last night, about eleven o'clock, a number of miners from Buck Mountain, supposed to be members of the Buckshot organization, came from their homes at the mines and made an attack on Mr. Henderson, Superintendent of the Buck Mountain mine. Mr. Henderson was severely stabbed under the chin, his left arm was broken, and he barely escaped a shot fired at him by some of the attacking party. The crowd then visited the house of Mr. Harvey and demanded a brother to the owner of the house. The younger Harvey, fearing that the party were enquiring for him, hid under the bed, when the party set upon the older Harvey and maltreated him to a considerable extent.

CLIPPINGS.

Mr. TOWNSEND THOMPSON, of Williamsport, Chester county, informs the Village Record that he is the owner of a turkey which has four perfect legs, using them all to walk on. GERTYBURG has procured two hundred hospital tents, which will be put up in time for the dedication of the monument, as the crowd expected to be present at that ceremony will be too large for the town to hold. The closing of the stores in Paris on Sunday meets with the approval of the employees in those establishments who have organized in order to force the proprietors to discontinue business on that day. The clerks in London, it is stated, have contributed $20,000 in order to assist their French brethren in the movement. The New Orleans Picayune says that a little girl in that city, named Emily Walhauer, had been complaining, for about a week, of pain and trouble in the region of the stomach, having nausea and vomiting and at others uncontrollable appetite, until finally, last Friday, she vomited a live mouse, which is now on exhibition at a drug store in New Orleans. A novelty in silks is a new color recently imported for dinner dresses called coralle. It is very brilliant in daylight, resembling a delicate shade of flame color with light and dark flues. One peculiarity of this coral silk, commendable in it all, is that it becomes both the blonde and brunette, which can be said of very few colors. Only eight dollars a yard. An Englishman, who for twenty long years had taken ferruginous baths during the summer, but without any benefit, was entirely cured in less than a second by a flash of lightning. The same story is related of an invalid one of the Austrian hospitals; being lucky enough one day to stand in the way of the atmospheric spark, he was enabled without delay to leave the establishment and resume his work. BURNED, a new species of cotton plant, it is reported, is now extensively cultivated in the Philippine islands by the missionaries. The plant is of very large size, and begins to yield in its fourth year. The cotton pods measure three or four inches in length, and one hundred of them, it is asserted, will yield three pounds of clean lint, which when cleaned sells for nine dollars a hundred weight. The Monkwearmouth Colliery, one of the deepest in the North of England, and employing one thousand men and boys, is now closed, in consequence of a strike of the hands. In April, it is stated, the men agreed to a reduction, which they now decline to accept, asserting that the rate of wages is insufficient to support a family. The proprietors allege that they are not receiving any return on their capital and cannot afford to pay higher wages. On Saturday afternoon last an unusually severe thunder storm passed over Catakill, N. Y., in the height of which a flash of lightning entered the house occupied by Mr. Benjamin Howland, West Catakill, striking a young girl, aged 23 years, named Miss Emma A. Ridley, of Auburn. Miss R. was ironing at a table, surrounded by other persons, and had just taken the iron in her hand when she dropped dead upon the floor. The bolt did little or no damage to the house. THE Gaulois gives this conversation at a German railway ticket office: "Railway Officer:—'Your tickets, gentlemen, are all closed in consequence of a strike.' 'Ah! Himmelkreuzscheichschwenothodden er wetter! May I be seized by ten million fiends if I can find my ticket.' 'Yes, here it is, for Elberfeld.' 'I don't care, I've got a return ticket.' 'The ticket will take you to the infernal regions rather than to Elberfeld.' 'Impetuous Traveller, grimly:—'I don't care, I've got a return ticket.' The Czar Nicholas, was one day exceedingly dissatisfied with the arrangement made by his Chamberlain for a ball at the Winter Palace. After walking about for half an hour with a shawl over his face, he sent for the aristocratic officer and told him that, inasmuch as he had just shown that he was an incorrigible duncel, he should walk up and down the ball-room from one to six o'clock in the morning, constantly repeating the words, 'I am an ass, I am an ass.' The courtier did the Czar's bidding. LAST Tuesday night a party of forty men armed with muskets, and with their faces blackened, went to the house of Croff Houston, living near the town of Shawnee, Johnson County, Kansas, and rapped at his door. Upon his opening, he was seized, a rope put around his neck, and he was taken a short distance from his house and hung until he was dead. He was accused of being a horse thief, and this summary punishment is supposed to have been done out to him by parties who believed in his guilt. The Lawrence Journal says: A young girl, named Jenkins, was terribly burned on Thursday night of last week. It seems that she was attending school at the Weber School, near Wheelingburg, and on returning to her room, took with her a book, and went to bed, leaving the candle burning that she might indulge in the luxury of reading in bed. Some part of her clothing took fire from the candle, and it was with great difficulty that she was rescued from the flames. She is so badly burned that but little hope of her recovery is entertained. EMIGRATION.—The English Home and Colonial Secretaries have recently been waiting upon by large deputations, urging the claims of the working classes for aid from the Government to emigrate. These deputations argue that voluntary emigration on a large scale can only be successful when it is directed to places where there is a ready and extensive demand for labor, and that the British Colonies do not compete with the United States, which absorb the emigrants from England. The Imperial Government was therefore requested to unite with the Colonial Governments to assist working men to settle on land in the Colonies by granting loans. Mr. Bruce, the Home Secretary, asked what guarantee the Government would have against the emigrants taking the aid and then crossing the frontier of Canada into the United States, where the largest centre of industry was to be found. He also argued that the independent character of which Englishmen are proud would be impaired by the receipt of Government aid, and hoped that the funds might be obtained through private contributions. It was suggested that the line of ships now rotting in the harbor might be put in commission and sent out to convey emigrants free of expense.

Household Recipes, by Baron Brisse.

From the remains of roast poultry, especially turkey, a delicacy can be made which I give you as follows. Chop very fine the pieces of meat, after having carefully removed the bones, and season them with salt, pepper and nutmeg. Chop equally fine some shallots and parsley, put over the fire in a saucepan, a lump of butter and some flour; stir, then moisten with cream or milk, or what is still better, half of either, with half brandy, add the shallots and parsley, season with salt, pepper and nutmeg, and let it stew gently for at least twenty minutes. When the sauce has good consistency, incorporate the hashed turkey, dress the saucepan to the corner of the range, and serve it hot, without letting it boil. To send to table, turn the hash out on a dish and surround it with a border of fried bread or poshied eggs. I profit by the occasion to tell you just how is the best way to poach eggs. Poached Eggs.—Put salted water, acidulated with a little vinegar, in a saucepan over the fire. When this water boils withdraw the saucepan to the side of the range, so that the ebullition shall not become too violent. Break perfectly fresh eggs, one after another, above the boiling water. Let them fall cautiously into the boiling water. When they are sufficiently hard take them out gently with a skimmer, watching carefully that they break; put them to drain on a plate and serve. Let us talk a little on the important subject of broiling, for which I am very often asked directions. The gentlemen have studied in the writings of practitioners this art of broiling, which is not an inspiration, as has been said, but really the result of long observation. When Julius Gouffe wrote his 'Cook Book' he made a series of experiments, at the end of which he felt able to declare that on a well-made fire, that is to say, a fire of equal extension above the bed of the coals being an inch thick for a 'strong fire' and half an inch for a 'slow fire.' A spare-rib of three-quarters of a pound requires ten minutes over a 'strong fire.' A beef-steak of the same weight, seven minutes. A mutton-cutlet, six minutes. A mutton kidney, spiced, four minutes. A veal cutlet, nine minutes. A mutton-chop, trimmed and bread-crumbed, requires ten minutes over a 'strong fire.' He adds that it is a great mistake to spare fuel in broiling; much good meat is lost by being imperfectly cooked, so as to economize fuel. In my opinion we can only deduce from all these experiments very useful information, but no rules. One acquires from study and observation the habit of timing a grill iron from the fire at the exact moment that the cooking is finished.
