Market Questions.—On this page this morning we devote a full column to the quotation of market prices, as compiled from the sales of the enterprising and highly responsible produce commission business firm of Voigt, Mahood & Co., No. 257 Liberty street.

This house, one of the staunchest and best managed of any business, has correspondents and consignees nearly every where in the country.

Action of the German Library Association in regard to the proposed celebration of the Fourth.

Yesterday evening a number of gentlemen—members of the German Reading Verein—met in their library and reading room, on Liberty street, and adopted and subscribed to a set of resolutions.

Dr. Meinertzhagen. The appointment of the resolutions, which we received at too late an hour for full translation, is that the statutes of the Association forbid the discussion of all questions bearing upon the religious or political opinions of individual members.

That while the Association brought the signature of this question, brought on by a number of Germans, had from the beginning, been characterized by the most respectful and courteous relations to the religious opinions of our American fellow citizens, it cannot see anything wrong in the proposed demonstration, which will be ordered with due regard to the solemnity of the day, and without offense to the religious feelings of those who think differently.
