Hayman, who as manager of the American Express Company lost $20,000 between Glendale and Lookland in March, 1868, and who claimed to have been robbed by two men, was on trial to-day before Judge Cox and a jury in the Common Pleas Court; for embez-zlement of the money. The State closed her testimony and the defense moved to arrest the case from the jury, on the ground that no legal proof of the prisoner's guilt had been offered. Judge Cox granted the motion and directed the jury to return a verdict of not guitty. They asked leave to insert in the verdict that asked leave to insert in the vertice that it was given under instruction of the Court, which was granted, and the defendant was then declared not guilty. Two other indictments against Hayman were then nullified, and he was discharged.
