Irish Church Disestablishment Bill Considered in the House of Lords—Treatment of Fenian Prisoners—Resignation from Paraguay—Great Battle in Cuba—Between Malmesbians and Imperials—The Laying of the French Cable Progressing Finely.

London, June 30.—Last evening the House of Lords met in Committee on the Irish Church Bill and discussed it at length.

The Earl of Derby opened in a long speech, defending the Irish Catholics from the charge of indifference to the question of disestablishment. He affirmed the Irish regarded it as an act of justice.

Earl Granville moved to amend the preamble in some slight particulars. The proposition for amendment, and was considered, but it was held to be altogether impracticable.

The Bishop of Oxford regarded the question of disestablishment as already fixed. He thought, however, no portion of the hands ought to be secularized.

Earl Carnarvon moved the substitution of the words "some thousands" for "thirty and seventy-two" in the thirteenth clause, in place of one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, as the basis of the disestablishment of the Irish Church.

Much discussion ensued, and at length the Lords divided, and the amendment was carried, as follows: For, one hundred and thirty-eight, against, seventy-four.

The House of Commons last night met. Mr. Moore called attention to the subject of the Fenian prisoners, and moved resolutions that the Government ought to institute public inquiry into the subject.

On a division the first part of the resolution was carried, and the second part was negatived. Mr. Moore said it was impossible to press the latter part, as the former part had been negatived.

The latter part of the motion was negatived, and the House adjourned at forty minutes past midnight.
