CITY AND SUBURBAN.

THE GAZETTE is furnished in the city the six days of the week for 15 cents per week; by mail, $8 per annum: 3 mos., $2.

For Sale.—A good paying route on this paper in Fifth and Sixth Wards, Allegheny. None but good, sober, industrious men need apply. Call at GAZETTE counting room betwen four and five o'clock P. M., to-day.

The Attention of capitalists is called to the valuable coal land in Virginia, offered for sale in to-day's paper, under head of "for sale," on fifth page.

Disorderly Conduct.—John Paradine was arrested yesterday, on a charge of disorderly conduct, and required to pay a fine of $25 and costs.

Paid the Penalty.—Dennis Golden, charged before Mayor Brush with selling liquor on Sunday, was, after a hearing yesterday, required to pay $50 and costs.

Liquor Cases.—There were four informations before the Mayor yesterday, against parties for selling liquor on Sunday. The actions are to recover the penalty of $50.

Found Dead.—Yesterday morning Jos. Alexander, a little child two months old, was found dead in bed by its mother, at 56 Diamond alley. Coroner Clawson was notified and held an inquest on the body and a verdict of death from natural causes was returned by the jury.

Open To-day.—J. W. Barker and Co. will have their stores at 59 Market street and 20 St. Clair street open to-day. They have been closed since the death of J. W. Barker, Sr., which occurred on Saturday, and whose funeral took place yesterday at Rahway, New Jersey.

Henry Silhurst, who formerly lived near Freedom, Beaver county, Penna., and supposed to live now in Allegheny City, will confer a favor by calling on Dr. Morrow, Freeport, formerly of Freedom, Beaver county, or stating by letter where he can be found.

Mayhem.—James McCaven made information before Alderman McMasters, yesterday, charging Frank Coyle with mayhem. It appears that the parties got into an altercation yesterday, when the defendant, it is alleged, bit deponent's finger almost off. Coyle was arrested, and in default of bail was committed to jail to await a hearing Saturday.

Body of an Infant Found.—Yesterday afternoon, the dead body of an infant was found in a cigar box, buried in Finch's field, Thirteenth ward, by some boys who were playing in the vicinity. Coroner Clawson was notified and held an inquest, and upon the testimony of Dr. McCook, who examined the body, returned a verdict to the effect that the child had been still born.

We desire to call the public attention to the Annual Literary Entertainments (published in our advertising column) to be given by the pupils and friends of S. A. Neale, this evening and to-morrow evening at Excelsior Hall, corner of Lacock and Federal streets, Allegheny.

The attractive feature of each evening will be the performance of the beautiful musical and floral Diana, entitled the May Queen. S. A. Neale has labored for many years, and we believe successfully, in elevating the moral and intellectual aptitudes of his people, and is deserving of every encouragement the people of this vicinity may give him.

We, the undersigned, believing that the public piece and prosperity depend upon the preservation of our Sunday privileges, without disturbance, invite a mass meeting of the citizens of Pittsburgh, without distinction of party, or of nationality, or of religious sect, who are opposed to the projected celebration of our National Anniversary on the next Sunday, the meeting to be held in Lafayette Hall, Wood street, on Thursday evening at 7½ o'clock: Isaiah Dickey, George Woods, LL. D., Wm. Lyon, A. Danse, M. D., Jas. Dalzell & Son, Thomas Wightman, Irwin B. Laughlin, Jas. B. Lyon, John P. Scott, Robert Thornburg, John Wilson, J. D. Annual Pic-nic.

Mechanics' Lodge, No. 8 I. O. O. F., will hold their second annual pic-nic at Moyce's Grove, Ross Station, Western Penna. Railroad, on Monday, July 5th, 1869. The gentlemen who compose the Committee of Arrangements will leave nothing undone that would in any way add to the enjoyment of guests, and those who participate in the festivities of the occasion will doubtless have a pleasant time. Trains will leave the Allegheny Depot at regular intervals for the grove, which is delightfully situated on the bank of the Allegheny, about six miles from the city. Dinner and refreshments will be provided for guests at the grove.

BUTLER, PA.

Seventh Day of the Shugart Poisoning Case—Testimony for the Commonwealth Continued—The Foreman of the Jury Faints and the Trial is Suspended for a Day.

BUTLER, June 30, 1869.

Court met at half past eight o'clock and began the seventh day of the Shugart murder trial.

THE SHUGART GENEALOGY.

The first witness was Mr. Gabriel Etzel, a nephew of the deceased, who testified as follows:

I am a merchant, residing and doing business in Butler. Jacob Shugart was my uncle. I came from Germany, from the same place as Shugart. I was raised, principally, about three miles from the town; was between twelve and thirteen years of age when I come here. In Germany lived within three miles of grandfather, and was at the house about once a month. Grandfather was about ninety years of age when he died. He died of old age. He was always in good health, as far as I know. Don't know when grandmother died. She was an old woman when she died, but I don't know what she died of. I don't recollect anything about her death. There were four boys and five girls in her family. The oldest boy is still living in Germany and is in good health; he is about sixty or seventy years old. Then there was Henry, Valentine and Jacob. Henry died since I came to this country, with rupture, I am told. Valentine is also dead. He died in this county. He was sick about eight or nine days. I can't tell how he died. He was over fifty. All the sisters, I think, lived to be over sixty, and none died suddenly. My mother is still living and in good health. I never heard of Jacob Shugart being sick up to the time of his death. I saw him frequently in town, nearly every day. He was very industrious. Don't know of him losing any time from his work through sickness. He was considered a very good hand. I was down at his house on the day of his death, after he had expired. Mr. Eick came up to the store and told me to hurry for the priest, that Shugart was dying. I could hardly believe it; asked if it was the old man himself. He said that it was, and told me to hurry. I then started to get the priest; before I got there I met Maggie Shugart, who told me she had been there and that the priest was coming. I then came back and was stopped at the store about five minutes, then went to the house. Before I got down met Mr. Leonard Wise, who told me it was all over—he was dead. When I got there he was dead and they were preparing to lay him out. I saw Mrs. Shugart. I think she was in Laux's room. I asked her why she didn't send for some one, that I would like to have seen him before he died. She said there was nobody to send, she was all alone and that she had done all she could. She said: "I know there is talk out already, but I did all I could." She told me he was sick the night before, that he had vomited. Took me up stairs to show me where he had vomited, but it had been cleaned up, and I could only see the marks. She told me to assist in making preparations for the funeral. I left in about ten minutes; staid till he was carried into the front room. I went back in the evening when I shut up the store and staid until eleven o'clock that night. While I was sitting up that night with Mr. Anthony Wise and Mr. Eick, in the room where the corpse was lying, they were holding a conversation at the front door. The family were in the back room, at the door leading from the one in which I was sitting. I heard Annie say, naming a schoolmate, that she had asked her if she had not got some rat poison lately. Heard no reply to that whatever, and no more was said. I went home soon after that. I was there the next evening before the funeral; staid nearly all night. Heard nothing then. Mr. Wise came to the store next day and I said, "Shugart died very suddenly." He said "Yes, it was sudden, and I'm not altogether satisfied. I'll tell you more about it to-night." In the evening he made about the same statement as he had testified to here. Then he told me all about her intimacy with Joseph Martin, [indicted with the prisoner in the present case.] He thought there was something not right, and it would be better to have a post mortem examination. After what he told me I thought it was best to have one myself. I told him to tell her that it would be better to have him examined. He said the children were agreed, but that she was opposed to it. We then arranged for Dr. Bredin to go to the house next morning and hold a post mortem examination at seven o'clock. Wise said it was an awful case, and might give the family a hard name, but thought he ought to be examined. I told him if it was found out afterwards that he (Shugart,) was poisoned, people might blame us for knowing and not telling it, and we intended to have it done privately, so that if nothing was wrong we would have nothing said. I told him also to be pretty sure, before he went on with the examination. He said he thought he (Shugart) was poisoned, from all the circumstances. Next morning it was about eight o'clock before Dr. Bredin could be found. We intended to have it done that morning, without her knowing anything about it. I went to the house with him, but I saw that it was too late, as the people had commenced to gather for the funeral. Wise wasn't there. I left the dooror and went home, thinking to see Wise on the road. I didn't hear any conversation between the doctor and Mrs. Shugart. Wise sent for me in a few minutes after I had got home. He stated that it was now too late to have it go on at the house, but it should be done at the grave. He told me to go to the priest and ask him if he would allow it. The priest, when I saw him, consented and said it ought to be done. We then made the arrangements. I then went to the funeral and came home with it, the affair being placed in the hands of the priest and doctor, so as to keep it quiet. I thought if I staid it might cause some of the rest to stay and defeat the arrangement. About an hour afterwards the priest came and told me the doctor had Shugart's stomach in his office. It took him three or four days before he had satisfactorily tested it. At the conclusion he said he was positive Shugart had died of poison.

He then wanted me to make information. I told him the Commonwealth should do so. He then went out and got Wise to make it.

SETTLING THE ESTATE.

The first Sunday after Shugart's death, I was asked to go down and examine the affairs. Charley Koch was along. Mrs. Shugart said she could attend to the affairs without an administrator. Some of the children, however, insisted on having one or two, and wanted Charley Koch and I. She still opposed it. We then asked Mr. McJunkin about the matter, and he said she was entitled to $300 in money, and one-third of the balance. We told her so, and I told her I thought she had better take the furniture, as she would still keep house, and it would not be appraised very high. She said she would take the money; that the children didn't seem to be satisfied now, and that after a while they might be still more dissatisfied, and that some of them said she might get married again, so she would take the money. We then went to get the papers at the office of Mr. Nixon. She asked him if one would not be enough, and taking this as a hint that she didn't want me, I left. In about fifteen minutes she sent me word that the papers were made out for two, and I had better come down and sign them. I wouldn't go, and said in reply that I thought she didn't want me, and I would have nothing to do with it. The business was settled hurriedly, before the doctor had concluded his experiments. We knew at this time that Shugart had been poisoned.

ANOTHER FAINTING SCENE.

At this juncture one of the jurors, Mr. Stephen Boice, the foreman, manifested indications of an approaching fainting fit. The attention of the Court was directed to the case, and proceedings suspended while the jury retired to the fresh air. Mr. Boice, however, got no better, and it was found necessary to call in medical attention. He was pronounced unable to sit in the box, but the physician thought in an hour or two he might be sufficiently recovered to proceed. It was now ten o'clock, and the court accordingly adjourned until two P. M., Mr. Boice in the meantime being placed in the care of a physician.

Afternoon Session.

When the Court assembled at two o'clock, Mr. Boice had recovered sufficiently to take a seat in the box with the other jurors, and the trial was proceeded with.

Mr. Gabriel Etzel was again brought on the stand and resumed his testimony —At the time of his death uncle had about seventeen or eighteen hundred dollars in notes and money, besides the household goods and the house and lot. The witness was not cross-examined.

Catharine Fisher, sworn—I live down near the Freeport bridge, near town. Knew Jacob Shugart and his family. Was at his house the last night he lay there dead. Mrs. Shugart's father came to the house that night. When Mrs. Shugart's father came his daughter, (the prisoner) said "I am lost." This was towards night.

No cross-examination.

WHAT THE NEIGHBORS SAY.

Mrs. Annie Wise, sworn—Live in Butler. Knew Jacob Shugart about sixteen years. Was at his house about half an hour after his death. I did'nt hear much said until old Mr. Schmoker, Mrs. Shugart's father, came in, when she said, "Father, I am lost." He said, "I don't want to hear any more words like that." It was spoken in German. I did not hear the father say anything before this. I staid about half an hour. I was at the funeral.

Cross-examination—This was before he was laid out. I did not see Mrs. Fisher there. Her father also said it was hard enough, but she had plenty to live on.

Mrs. Walberg Kline, sworn.—Am a neighbor to Shugart's. Our lot joins with Shugart's property, next to the creek. Mrs. Shugart came to my house the same day her husband died. She wanted parsnip tops for the little child that was sick, about half past nine or ten o'clock. She said it was not so hard that the little girl was sick, but that her husband had gone away sick too, and she did not know how he would come home. She was afraid he would get the cramp. I said "you'd better go and look after him." Mrs. Shugart said, "I can't; my little girl is sick." I said, "I'd rather leave the child and attend to my husband, as the other children could attend to the sick one." Then Mrs. Shugart went home and did not come back. She stated at the same time that Mr. Shugart's mother died very suddenly when she came home from the field. At another time, before Mr. Shugart died, she was afraid Mr. Shugart would die suddenly, like her brother and mother. This was about two weeks before he died. She also said she was afraid he would die soon. About three or four weeks before his death she said he had an attack of the cramps, and she was afraid if he was attacked again it would take him off. He did not tell me, on the morning of his death, what was the matter with him the night before. I was at the house a few minutes before Mr. Shugart died. Mrs. Shugart said, "Mrs. Cline, I told you this morning that my man would soon die." She said she gave him some whiskey and pepper after the medicine, when he said, "kill me, kill me, I must die; that whiskey is burning out my heart." I then went home. At this time he was still lying in bed and not laid out. I only went back when he was buried. I heard her say Mr. Shugart had eaten a radish at dinner time, which was like poison. I had often, before Mr. Shugart's death, saw Joe Martin at the house. I saw him about every day during the summer. He had full access to every part of the house. He was there generally when Shugart was away. He commenced to go so regular about the Fourth of July. I saw him in Mr. Shugart's house on the Fourth of July. She went with me to a picnic that day; Martin was there, too. Mrs. Shugart washed for Martin. She was not in the habit of taking in washing for people. I saw Martin twice in the night time go through my sister-in law's lot, next door, and then into Shugart's house. This was about eleven o'clock. He had to climb over the fence to get into Shugart's lot. I would often see him lurking around when the moon was up. In the day time I used often to see him go in through the gate. From my house I can see into the back door of Shugart's house.

Cross-examined—We were on good terms. On the Fourth of July, when I went into Mr. Shugart's house, I wanted to get Mrs. Shugart to go with me and my sister-in-law to the picnic. Shugart was there, and Martin, and several of the children. I stated to my neighbors that I would have to be a witness in this case. I never said I could testify in this case and get money enough to buy a shawl or a dress. I was subpœned to the Coroner's Inquest and the Grand Jury, and was then summoned to Court. I did not see Shugart going to work on the morning of the day of his death. She got the parsnip tops from me. She said they were good for the cramps.

[The witness was cross-examined further at some length, and through a misunderstanding of the question, gave some rather amusing and spicy answers, which caused a general laugh. She at once concluded the counsel was making her the butt of his ridicule and excitedly spoke out, "You try to make the biggest fool of me of any witness." The counsel assured her that she was entirely mistaken, but she persisted in it that he was trying "to make a fool of" her, and that she had been "made a bigger fool than any of the others," which so wrought upon her feelings that she fell to weeping hysterically and had to be dismissed from the stand. As she was passing the counsel's (Mr. Thompson's) chair, she said vehemently, through her tears, "You be de biggest fool who ever set in de Court House," an expression of opinion which was received with hearty applause, as much by the object of attack as the large crowd of spectators.]

MRS. SHUGART AND MARTIN—THEIR ALLEGED INTIMACY.

John M. Vivoe, sworn.—Reside near the house occupied by Jacob Shugart at the time of his death, and on the same street. Am a teamster. The first day I noticed Joseph Martin at the house of Jacob Shugart was on the second night of the Horse Fair. I staid out quite late that night, and in going home passed my stable, which is on the southeast corner of my lot. My wagon, a covered one, stood in one corner of my stable. I noticed a man in the wagon. I passed on, but came back, and asked him what he was doing there. He said he wanted to sleep a little. I told him that was no place to sleep. He said it was good enough. I then went home. When I was up stairs, getting ready for bed, I stood by the window next to the street a few minutes, and I saw a woman come out of Shugart's house and go down to the stable. She was in there no time at all till she came out again and went back to the house. A few minutes after that I heard some one walking down my alley, and saw a person cross the street and go into the lot owned by Mrs. Kline. He walked along the fence and went into the same stable the woman came out. He came out, after a while, and went up into Mr. Shugart's house and into the front room. I then went to bed and saw no more. It [illegible] o'clock; there was a light [illegible] house. I wakened up about [illegible] and went to the same win- [illegible] saw the same man coming [illegible] Shugart's house, and walk on [illegible] Mr. John Stokes' house [illegible] There was a light in [illegible] it was Joseph Martin. He had a boat, I was told, boarding at Stokes'. The next Saturday night I was coming home again, with Mr. Manning, and when we passed the wagon, I related the circumstance I had seen the night of the fair. When I went to my bedroom, I heard voices on the street below and looked out. Saw about half a dozen men standing together and talking in German. I heard one say he could prove what he said. They then started and in a short time afterwards I saw Joseph Martin come down the alley and along the fence to the stable, the same one he had been in the night before. He was in but a few minutes when Mrs. Shugart come out of her house and went into the same stable. I went down stairs into my lot and got some coal and threw against the stable where they were. I then went back into the house and went to the same window, and in a few minutes saw Mrs. Shugart come out and go into her house. That's all I saw that time. The next I saw was on the fifteenth of October. We had a torchlight procession that night. After the procession had disbanded I went home, and in going down the alley from the court house towards my house, I noticed a man following me. This was pretty late at night. This was Joseph Martin. He come after me until I lost him in the darkness. He was going towards the same place I had seen him before. He walked very slow, and would stop every few steps. I saw nothing more that night.

No cross-examination.

Mrs. Annie Stokes, sworn.—Live on Washington street, Butler, and neighbor to Mrs. Shugart; have lived there sixteen years. Joseph Martin had a son, John, boarding at our house and learning his trade with my husband. Martin was often in our house, and slept with his son. One Sunday I staid at home from church and Martin came in. He told me he had come from Jacob Shugart. This was about a couple of weeks before the 4th of July. I had a conversation with Martin.

Defense objected to having this conversation repeated and asked that the Commonwealth state their proposition in writing. They objected because Martin was not on trial, or a witness, and hearsay evidence could not be taken.

Mr. McCandless presented the proposition in writing, stating that "the Commonwealth proposed to ask the witness on the stand whether Joseph Martin, the accusery before the fact, told the witness in July, before the death of Jacob Shugart, that Mrs. Shugart told him she would like to have him (Martin); she liked him better than Shugart for a man; that she said she hoped Shugart would die soon; she hated him; she hated the Shugarts—for the purpose of showing a motive for the commission of the crime, and to show the state of feeling existing in the mind of the accused toward the deceased, and want of affection in the prisoner toward her husband, deceased."

Mr. Thompson, for the defense, was about preparing an objection, when the Court suggested that the offer, for the present, be withdrawn. It was not evidence at this stage of the case. It was proper to produce evidence of a motive for the commission of the crime, but it must be by competent evidence. The mere fact that Martin is included in the same indictment is not sufficient to warrant his declarations, in the absence of Mrs. Shugart, being received, unless evidence going to show a conspiracy or confederation between them is before the Court. When such evidence was produced, the offer might come in.

Mr. McCandless accordingly withdrew the offer, as suggested, and the testimony was resumed.

Mrs. Shugart often came down to my house, and one Saturday evening Mr. Martin came down. He was there about half an hour; it was about eight o'clock when Mrs. Shugart came in; they talked together about half an hour. When he started to go home Mrs. Shugart said "If you go, I'll stay awhile." He went, and she stayed about three or four minutes longer. Then she went out, and I went to the door with her. It was quite dark. I stood there awhile, when I heard her calling Mr. Martin, and he answered. I opened my gate then and went out. I saw two men coming, when I went in again. The men stopped at my gate, and I recognized them as John Martin and Joe Fedder. John asked me if that was his father and Mrs. Shugart. He then went back after them. In my house they had talked with me, and together. Martin had a letter from Germany, and they talked about that. It was a good while before Shugart's death. They would often meet this way at my house, about three or four times in a week, generally in the evening. They usually went away separately. I knew they met again when they went away. Martin at this time was sleeping at Mr. Fisher's, in the north end of town. They didn't speak anything wrong in our house. They conversed together in a very nice manner. Mrs. Shugart had a whistle, which she used as a signal to meet Joseph Martin. One time John Martin and I were watching, when we saw Martin go into the stable. Mrs. Shugart then came out on her back porch and whistled. She went in, came out again, and went down to the stable. Martin then came back to the house with her; they went into the house quietly. He didn't come back to our house that night. I heard this whistle many times. I never talked to Martin as to what he thought of Mrs. Shugart. I often teased him about Mrs. Shugart.

I was at Shugart's the day he died. He was dead and was not yet laid out. I said to Mrs. Shugart, "What ails your man; he died so quick." She said he had died from a rupture. After that she said he had eaten a radish and that killed him, perhaps. She then told me she had given him whisky and pepper; at first didn't like to give it; after he had it down he got much worse, and drank one glass of water after another. She didn't expect him to die so soon.

The witness was not cross-examined.

Court now adjourned till Wednesday morning.

The Truth in a Nut Shell.

It is a very hard matter to decide from the many conflicting statements that from time to time appear in the daily papers regarding the number of sewing machines sold in this community. Some enterprising agents assert that they sell double the number sold by their rivals, while others make more modest assertions. In order to help our readers arrive at the truth, as the popularity of a machine is the best evidence of its superiority, we would state, as all business men know, that each agent is compelled by law to make a return under oath of his yearly gross sales. From the 1st day of April, 1868, to the 31st day of March, 1869, as we learn from official sources, these returns were made as follows:

Weed Sewing Machine	112 Grant stree'	$38,026.07
Singer " "	Sixth and Penn	35,500 00
Howe " "	4 Sixth street	25,600 00
Grover & Baker " "	Fifth avenue	24,600.00
Empire and Wilcox & Gibbs	49 Sixth st	18,500 00
American Ottonhole Company		no return

In considering these figures, it must be remembered that the Weed agency had not the advantage of a good office location, being on Grant street, under the shadow of the Cathedral, where purchasers had to seek it out. The others had better opportunities for attracting trade, so far as business places were concerned, and all had larger extent of territory than the Weed, which is confined to Western Pennsylvania alone, and does not take in Eastern Ohio and Western Virginia. With their new and elegant rooms at 116 Market street, the sales of the Weed are running doubly as large as what they were on Grant street. Figures won't lie and the reader can draw his own inference. It is a settled fact that the Weed machine gives decided satisfaction in every family where used, is the simplest in construction, easiest to work, most lasting and durable and adapted to a wider range of work than any of its rivals.

Coroner's Inquest.

Coroner Clawson held an inquest, yesterday, on the body of William F. Metzler, who died suddenly of heart disease in street car No. 46, on the Manchester Passenger Railway, about six o'clock Tuesday evening. It appears that as the car was passing along the street, he started on a run to overtake it, and succeeded, but had scarcely taken his seat before he fell on the floor of the car. He was picked up and carried to Mercer & Seitz's drug store, where he expired in a few moments afterwards. The body was then removed to Rodman's coffin rooms, on Ohio street, where it was identified yesterday morning by Mrs. Metzler, the widow of deceased. The jury returned a verdict of death from heart disease.

The Minstrels.

Notwithstanding the fact that the thermometer was considerably above zero last evening, away up in the nineties, the Opera House was filled with a large and fashionable audience to witness the excellent entertainment given by Duprez & Benedict's inimitable troupe. To-night there will be an entire change of programme, in which will be introduced "The Great National Peace Jubilee," a burlesque on the Boston Jubilee, performed by this troupe only. The Company is composed of fifteen star performers, some of whom are at the head of the profession, and, as a consequence, their entertainments are of a very superior character.

Lace Goods and Trimmings.

As lace goods and trimmings are articles in which the ladies are interested, we desire to call the attention of our many lady readers to the large and well selected stock of goods, including lace goods, trimmings, hosiery and gloves, at the old established house of W. Moorhead, No. 81 Market street. It is only necessary for them to visit the establishment, and examine the stock, whether they desire to purchase or not, to be convinced that the goods have been selected with great care, and especially for this market. Mr. Moorehead's long experience in the business enables him to purchase such goods as are required to suit the tastes of his numerous patrons. He keeps thoroughly posted in the eastern markets relative to the change of styles, &c., and is thereby enabled to present to his customers all the novelties as soon as presented in eastern cities.

Queensware.

Owing to the rapid increase in the demand for the excellent queensware, manufactured by S. M. Kier & Co., of his city, the firm, we are informed, have in contemplation the enlargement of their factory, so as to increase their capacity for manufacturing, in order to be able to supply the demand. They have on hand at their warerooms, No. 363 Liberty street, a large stock of queensware of every variety of style and pattern, equal, if not superior in point of elegance in finish, strength and durability, to the finest Liverpool iron stone, and as it is sold at a much lower rate than it is possible to purchase imported ware, dealers and others will find it to their advantage to call and examine the stock.

Books and Stationery.

We desire to call attention to the large and well selected stock of stationery and books, new and second hand, to be found at the well established and popular book and stationery house of Col. J. D. Eagan, Sixth avenue, near Smithfield street. The stock of stationery comprises all the latest styles of plain and fancy cap, note and letter paper and envelopes. His stock of books includes all the latest publications of popular authors, text books for schools, Sunday School library books, and a general assortment of miscellaneous works. Second hand books bought and sold on reasonable terms. On Col. Eagan's counter will also be found all the late magazines and periodicals.
