The gold market for the past week has been very steady at about 187, the fluctuations each day seldom ranging more than $\frac{1}{4}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. Although an attempt was made on Friday to de- press the gold premium it failed, a few sales only being made after business hours. The coming week is likely to witness violent fluctuations in all the departments. For Gold, small advance is expected, on the plea of specie shipments, but the abundance of cash and high rates for carrying will prevent parties from speculating for a rise. The active demand for exchange and better quotations for bonds will also have a tendency to advance quotations in Government securities. |
