

PETROLEUM MARKET.

Office of Pittsburgh Gazette, Friday, July 29, 1899. The oil market continues quiet and rather dull, and devoid of anything really new or important.

Private and reliable advices from the West report the trade there in petroleum to be better, and in some respects anything, even worse.

Refiners do not complain that Crude is too high, but they do complain, and with good reason, too, that it is much higher relatively than it was.

Compared with yesterday, has undergone no notable change, though the market is a trifle weaker.
