The corner stone of the new State Lunatic Hospital will be laid at Danville, on Thursday, August 26th, by Governor Geary.

The manner in which the railway kings contrive to use the courts of New York in furtherance of their respective ends, goes far to sustain the imputation that Judges are becoming at least quite as purchasable as legislators.

It will gratify all good citizens to learn that "the Administration is substantially a unit upon all political questions, foreign and domestic, and that all statements and insinuations that the President and a portion of his advisers are seriously at variance, has no foundation in fact."

PRESIDENT GEARY is now at Kane, Pa., visiting General T. L. Kane, who was one of the officers of the famous "Bucktail Regiment" early in the war. It is not known by what route he will return to the Capitol, but it is not unlikely to be by way of Pittsburgh, in which case his reception here will be worthy of the President, of the individual, and of our own people.

The first Democratic nominee in Ohio declined the unsought honor, because his obligations to his private creditors were sacred. As he would have been placed on a reputation platform, it is evident that he meant to be entirely consistent, in declining, in such marked phraseology, any sort of connection therewith. The Pennsylvanians think that Gen. Rosecrans went very unkindly out of his way to give them and their ideas a merciless rap. It certainly looks like it.

SOME weeks ago the Democrats of this Commonwealth appeared to be confident of an easy and conclusive victory in October. Whether they actually were so may well be doubted. All the facts essential to sustain such exhilaration were entirely wanting. Besides, it has become the habit of the Democrats to seem most sanguine when their prospects are the worst, as was evidenced last year down to mid-summer. But, whether the confidence recently manifested was real or simulated, it has disappeared. The whole Democratic host is dolorous enough. It does not retain sufficient spirit to make even an interesting contest.

A COTEMPORARY regards that provision of the naturalization-law, which confers the acquisition of citizenship to "free white persons," as taking the Chinese immigration out of the operation of the new XVth Article. This depends upon what is meant by citizenship. The immigrant who lands upon our coast, whether European or Asiatic, male or female, becomes that moment a citizen. Political rights can only be acquired upon certain other fixed conditions. The adoption of the new Article will itself work an instant repeal of all existing legislation in conflict therewith, and the immigrant from either Hong Kong or the Guinea coast will be entitled to the benefit of such provisions of the naturalization law as remain unchanged, except in such States as may exclude it specified nativity. Whether that exclusion would suffice to exclude Chinese from the suffrage, is a question yet to be settled by the proper authorities.

The law-officers of the Federal Government sustain the course of General CANBY in insisting that the existing Federal legislation should be complied with until legally supplanted by other conditions. The test-oath is to be exacted from the members-elect of the Virginia Legislature. The law is positive, in its requirements, and the course taken by CANBY is explicitly and fully endorsed by the Administration, the President and his Cabinet concurring with the Attorney General therein. The case of Virginia will be a precedent for Mississippi and Texas also.

It is intimated, in some partisan quarters, that this requirement will be disregarded by the Virginia Legislature, members assuming the right to judge of their own qualifications. There is nothing to be apprehended from this. The Legislature will have no legal existence until it is recognized by the Federal authority as assembled, and organized in faithful accordance with the provisions of the law. Nor is it likely to suit the Conservative policy, even encouraged and fed as that has been by its late success in Virginia and Tennessee, to hazard an open conflict with the reconstruction-law. The leaders who are engineering the present Democratic Restorations in those States are quite too shrewd for that.

The effect of recent developments at Washington, as to the political opinions of the Administration, will hardly fail to be decisive upon Republicanism in every Southern State.

The future policy of the opposition upon the colored suffrage question has not yet taken definite shape. At present, they oppose the proposition in some of the States, while in others, notably New York, they favor its concession. On this question, the Democratic party has not yet attained a clearly pronounced National status. Its wisest leaders await events. If their Southern friends establish their ability to throw off the conservative mask, returning and maintaining the old ground, upon the dogma of a "white man's government," there is no doubt of the Democratic intention at the North, to occupy the same position. But if, on the other hand, the recognition of colored suffrage shall be found to be essential to a Democratic predominance in the reconstructed and border States, the unanimous concurrence of the Northern wing of the party in its favor may be relied upon as soon as the next National Convention meets, if not before. Everything depends upon the success with which the game is to be played within the coming twelve-month, in the Southern States—the North looking on without committing itself as a body on one side or the other, except to amuse local prejudices for the time being. In the meantime, it is satisfactory to know that the Administration does not propose to play into their hands, and that the Republican party of the South, learning wisdom in recent and bitter experiences, will cease to encourage the Democratic hopes for the return of the old dark regime of proscription and aristocracy.

The remark that "Monopoly cannot be mastered long in an open market" needs little credit to the "Times" sagacity. "Monopoly" that has run up the price of Coal is a monopoly by a few railroad and canal companies of the means of transportation between our coal region and the seaboard. These companies, closely combined, are now clutching the lion's share of the profits realized from coal.

Why don't the Tribunes learn something about the anthracite coal trade of Pennsylvania? No "monopoly" of the means of transportation exists; nor are the "railroad and canal companies" closely combined. Some of the most prominent railroad and canal companies have been doing next to nothing all summer. They have fallen far short of making expenses. The trouble is not with the "companies" at all; but with the Miners' Association, which insists that employers shall pay one-fifth of the price coal may sell for as wages, and concede the right of the miners to strike whenever coal should bring only ten dollars per ton at tide water. To the former part of this demand the companies raise no objection, but they withhold consent to the plan of striking when coal is low. What the companies want is a constant and unceasing market, rather than a high one. At least, this is emphatically true of the companies that mine coal and sell it.

The Tribunes, in common with all the other New York journals, has been amusingly stupid and ignorant, for the last three months, in its discussions of the coal embroilment. Pray, go to persons near your own door, who are concerned in the coal trade, and be enlightened.

METROPOLITAN JOURNALISM. New York journals are singularly unfortunate as to facts when dealing with the men or affairs of Pennsylvania. Take the existing strike of the miners in the anthracite coal counties as affording an illustration. Not one of the New York newspapers has done anything but blunder and mislead its readers touching that whole case. Only a few steps from their doors are the offices of the principal coal companies, and an hour spent in talking with their managers would bring out all the essential facts. Another illustration may be had in the war of the railway giants for the control of the Albany and Binghamton line. The Tribunes insists that the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company enjoys a monopoly of the coal trade at Binghamton, and thence by canal to Utica and rail to Syracuse; that the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad Company is resolved to break this monopoly by building a road of its own from Scranton to Binghamton; and that the Erie wants to control the coal market at Albany.

Now, the fact is, that the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company, instead of holding a monopoly of the coal trade at Binghamton, never has sold a ton of coal in that market. The Delaware, Lackawanna and Western holds the monopoly, under an exclusive contract which, of course, is voidable at law, for the delivery of coal at that point, and finds the demand so large that it proposes to connect its own line, which now terminates at Great Bend, with the line it has leased, running between Binghamton and Syracuse. This monopoly the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company is endeavoring to break, by the new road it is furnishing the money to build from Carbondale, in Luzerne county, over to Ninerab, in Brown county, N. Y., there to connect with the Binghamton and Albany; by which latter line it will, also, be enabled to reach the Midland road and the Chenango, both avenues to Central New York. The Hudson river terminus of the Delaware and Hudson Canal is at Rondout, (near Kingston,) from which place Albany can be more cheaply supplied with coal than by rail directly from the rivers.

We stated a day or two ago, that the Binghamton and Albany railroad was a link in the best route between Boston and the west, which was the reason why the Erie Company desired to control it, and why the Albany interest, that is, the New York Central, was opposed to a movement to that end. This link also, furnishes the shortest and cheapest railway communication between the anthracite coal fields and Boston. The supply of coal for a large part of New England must and will go over it, unless its tariff of tolls shall be framed and maintained for the especial purpose of sending that traffic some other way.

THE INDUSTRIAL COUNTERPOISE. The remark that the preponderating money interest of a nation, no matter what form it may take, will, in the long run control its governmental action, has acquired almost the force of an axiom. In England, through many ages, the landed proprietors, possessed the chief political power. This period lasted until, through the diversification of industries, agriculture ceased to embody and represent the principal wealth of the whole people; and then the commercial classes assumed the supremacy, which they still maintain. In the United States, prior to the rebellion, slavery was the paramount financial power, and in consequence the slaveholders, for the long period of sixty years, were the arbiters of political destiny. What they wanted they set up, and what they desired they had. Since the abolition of slavery it has become manifest that the Railroad represents the controlling interest. Already more millions of dollars are invested therein than in any other one instrumentality of modern civilization, and the development of the railway systems is yet in its infancy. Of the aspirations to which it is destined to attain, glimpses are snatched, but scarcely more. So far the larger railway corporations are, to a considerable extent, acting in competition with each other. They are struggling to perfect their respective connections, and their struggles are doing more practically to obliterate the old conceptions of State Sovereignty and independence than all the tendencies to centralism which are the outgrowth of purely political causes. These organizations exert a profounder control over various State Legislatures than was conceived possible half a century ago; and find little or no difficulty in shaping laws to suit their own desires. Indeed, the demoralization of the legislative bodies, which is a matter of general complaint, was produced, and is maintained, by those corporations almost exclusively, and is likely to be perpetuated until they shall have obtained all they want, or other agencies shall arise to confront and conquer this special one.

It is conceivable that after the corporations owning trunk lines shall have established their connections from coast to coast, that more harmonious relations may exist between them than is possible so long as the existing struggle shall be kept up. When the general interests of railway corporations are involved, they now pull together, as is evidenced in the modification of the common law, obligations of transporters of passengers, baggage and merchandise. These modifications, large and important considered wholly apart from the drift to which they belong, becomes yet more significant when reviewed as attesting the power of these corporations to make all laws conform to their necessities or caprices. If, as already intimated, the lapse of a comparatively few years should bring about a substantial agreement among the railway companies, it would seem that they must be able to dominate all other interests; to put up or down whomever they will in public life; and to revise the statute books to suit their convenience.

It has been, therefore, not altogether without satisfaction that we have watched the power which Labor Associations have been steadily acquiring over all aggregations of capital, and in particular over capital invested in railways and enterprises closely affiliated therewith. Let us illustrate what we mean. Last spring brakemen on the Erie railway revolted in combination. They were less than one hundred in number; but they brought that gigantic corporation to terms inside of twenty-four hours. Later, this season, the Miners' Association, in this State, seized various prudent corporations by the throat, and have not yet relaxed their grip. From one to two hundred millions of capital stand absolutely idle, waiting the consent of the association to be employed. Our readers know we do not approve of all this Association has done; but we do believe in workmen co-operating for mutual protection, whenever the conditions of the compact are reasonable and proper. What we mean to inculcate, just now, is precisely that, in organized industries may ultimately be found the true and efficient counterpoise and remedy for the immense influence which has concentrated, and must hereafter concentrate, in the hands of managers of railway and other companies.

labor and attention to one thing till it is accomplished, and when that is done, and well done, takes up another and so goes on until his whole task is finished—such is the fashion and history of the Republican party. And here call the attention of all reformers to the unquestionable fact that their best chance for success in the bosom of the Republican party, is in the bosom of the Republican party, and will in due time take up one reform after another, and such as are found to be necessary and proper will be pushed forward to final success. The Republican party is emphatically the great reform party of the nation.

But, what, on the other hand, has the Democratic party to offer in contrast with all this? It presents a beggarly dish of Virginia abstractions, blood-stained and spotted with the leprosy of treason and political death, a record of opposition to all the glorious things that I have mentioned—a record of negotiations, dissatisfactions, and failures. In short, you discover not one thing that gratifies the eye, warms the heart or meets the approval of the judgment. History is full of instances where nations have been stricken where nations have failed to produce any great or good thing, but they have continued to decline until they have gone down to the point where there must be dissolution to produce reformation.

And so it is with parties. The Democratic party, for a score of years, has been stricken with poverty of resources, feebleness of purpose, submission to bad principles, and has been incapable of producing or proposing any great or good thing. That the Republican party has made some mistakes is not to be denied, for "no man is infallible; but they were mistakes and not crimes, and when discovered and comprehended were rectified.

And is there any good reason why the Republican party, after having preserved the care and custody of it to the Democracy? When the flames of your burning empire have been extinguished, you watchman to protect it from fire in the future, or when your child has been rescued from the waves, would you deliver all the blood that has been shed and the treasure that has been expended for the preservation of the Republic.

A REMARKABLE DISCOVERY. The Louisville Journal reports some of the wonderful results of the observations of the recent eclipse, made by Prof. Winlock, of Cambridge.

The most remarkable discovery, however, far surpassing those of Janssen in India, is the presence of an ocean of magnesium in the sun. Of this six new lines discovered by him, four are magnesium. It is, therefore, unnecessary for any earth-born mortal to claim that he discovered the power that magnesium possesses for making a brilliant light. The sun was before him in the manufacture, and was probably engaged in the work of firing up with hydrogen gas and lighting up with magnesium before this planet was born.

Of five lines known before the discovery of the six new ones by Prof. Winlock, four are known to be hydrogen. The constitution of the other is unknown. Another curious fact seems to be settled now, is that the corona of the sun and the Aurora Borealis are identical in constitution.

of States; our mineral wealth and our resources of every kind are being developed with unexampled success. The recent exhibition of textile fabrics in Cincinnati shows what wonderful progress the Northwest is making in manufactures, and what may be expected in the future, under an honest and wise administration. It is true, all these interests were much depressed by three years of misrule under the late Administration, but their condition may be referred to with pride and satisfaction, notwithstanding the Democratic party tells us that the country is being ruined, eaten up and devoured by heavy taxes and the national debt. Every department of business is prosperous, and most are flourishing, and although it is said that the merchants and traders are not making as much money as they have done at other times, yet the prosperity and permanency of business is established by the fact that there are comparatively few failures. It is said by a distinguished statistician in whose opinion I have confidence, that there have been fewer failures in business during the last six years than during any former six years in the history of the country, and if this is true it shows that the country is doing remarkably well in what the Democratic party calls its "dying condition."

The taxes can be made lighter by the faithful collection of the revenues and by the introduction of economy and retrenchment. It is estimated that as things are now going on in the faithful collection of the revenue, and through reform in every department of the Government, it will be in the power of Congress, at its next session, while continuing to pay large sums annually in the reduction of the national debt, to reduce the general rate of taxation for internal revenue at least fifteen per cent.

In conclusion, I would advise the people of Ohio to stand fast by the men who stood fast by the country through the war, and by the true principles of reconstruction since the war; to stand fast to the Republican party, to which the country owes more than any other country ever owed to any political party, and not by irritation from real or fancied grievances, or by indifference or neglect, permit the power of the Government again to return to that political organization which is so largely responsible for all the blood that has been shed and the treasure that has been expended for the preservation of the Republic.

A LIFE-SAVING ARRANGEMENT. A radical change has been introduced in the practice of medicine. Physicians have ceased to torture and prostrate their patients. Instead of pulling down, they build up; instead of assaulting, they soothe; instead of robbing, they supply; instead of calomel, antimony, sulphur, mercury, and rapping, they give the favor of the resources of the fact. It is now rarely resorted to even by the most dogmatic members of the profession. The old creed was that disease was something which must be beaten down, and that the more it was beaten down, the more it was increased. The new creed recognizes the improvement of the general health as essential to the cure of all local ailments. The fact is that HIGGINS' "LIFE-SAVING" is a medicine that has ever brought to the assistance of mankind in all cases of disease. The fact is that it is approved by practitioners of the modern school, and that it has been used by the most distinguished physicians of the past and the present, and that it has been used by the most distinguished physicians of the present and the future. It is a medicine that is as safe as water, and as effective as lightning. It is a medicine that is as cheap as a penny, and as valuable as a diamond. It is a medicine that is as simple as a child's play, and as powerful as a giant's strength. It is a medicine that is as quick as a flash, and as lasting as a monument. It is a medicine that is as good as gold, and as precious as a pearl. It is a medicine that is as true as a star, and as bright as a sun. It is a medicine that is as pure as a dove, and as gentle as a lamb. It is a medicine that is as kind as a mother, and as merciful as a father. It is a medicine that is as loving as a friend, and as helpful as a neighbor. It is a medicine that is as wise as an old man, and as brave as a hero. It is a medicine that is as noble as a king, and as just as a judge. It is a medicine that is as honest as a merchant, and as faithful as a servant. It is a medicine that is as loyal as a soldier, and as patriotic as a citizen. It is a medicine that is as virtuous as a saint, and as holy as a priest. It is a medicine that is as good as God, and as great as heaven. It is a medicine that is as perfect as a gem, and as flawless as a crystal.
