A MAN passed through Allentown the other day, pushing a wheelbarrow in which was seated his wife, unable to walk from rheumatism, and who was trundled all the way here on a wheelbar-row from Illinois. Two little children of the pair ran along by the side of the father the entire distance. We could not learn the name of the family, nor whither they were going. Truly a woman is blessed with a faithful husband who would toil and slave thus for her welfare. This trip we believe is unprecedented .- Carbon Democrat.

RECENTLY, at Middleboro, in this county, there appeared before Justice Pease a man who gave his name as Wm. Hart, a man who gave his name as whill harr, of Erie, and Mrs. Mary——, (the Justice wouldn't give her name), said to be a school ma'm of this city, formerly of Fairview, Mercer county. The lady was married in a white dress, but had another to travel in, using the buggy in front of the door as a dressing room, for the pur-pose of putting it on. The bridegroom tendered a small amount of currency for the trouble given, and drove off in a great hurry, seemingly in fear that some one might come unbidden. No cards.—Eric

THE Punxeutawney Plaindealer says: "On Monday afternoon a most shocking accident occurred on East Branch, near Big Run, which resulted in the death of John McAninch, Eiq., of Gaskill town-ship: He was engaged in felling a hem-lock tree, which, in its fall, struck a small dead maple, breaking it in several pieces, one of which flew back end foremost striking him on the side and groin, tearing the flesh away and mutilating him in a most horrible manner. His death must have been almost instantaneous. Mr. McAninch was alone when the accident occurred; but, from all appearances, he attempted to escape by getting be-hind another tree, and must have nearly hind another tree, and must have nearly succeeded in doing so when the fragment struck him, as, in its course, it tore the bark off the tree behind which he was lying when found.

WE have the outlines of an occurrence in the upper end of this county, which is terrible. A family had a large bull dog who showed a fierce disposition toward strangers, but had always been peaceable enough in the family and no one had any fears of his disturbing the children. One day last week, one of the little ones was sitting on the floor and the dog standing by, when the child grasped at his tail, by, when the child grasped at his tail, probably to assist it in getting on its feet. This is the fastest time of the head shock it yieldently, and kept his hold until his jaws were forced open and he was driven from the house. The father took a gun and fired two loads into him, but the dog made for the house again, to finish his work on the child, when a third shot dropped him. Delirium Tremens in the New York Hos-

Dr. Roosa contributes to the September numter of Putnam's Magazine a pleasant historical sketch of the New York Hospital, in which several incidents of practice in that venerable institution are narrated. The following passage describes the scenes in one ward:

"The ward devoted to sufferers from mania potu, or delirium tremens-the 'del. trem.' ward, as the nurses and house doctors were apt to call it-would alone furnish scenes for the pencil of the artist which might surpass those of Hogarth or Holbein, so frightful is the demoniac ap-pearance of man when the victim of his ssions, and overcome with awful dread at the horrid shapes which his diseased brain had pictured. The visitor to such a ward, when it is well filled, would almost imagine that he had entered one of the portals of the regions of the lost.

"One poor victim iles muttering to himself, and constantly picking his bed clothes, now and then rising up and fixedly staring, with horror delineated in literatim et punctuatim, of a notice taken every feature, on some fancied demon from the shafts of the Pennsylvania emerging from a crevice or corner. Another is hurling back, with awful blasphemy, the taunts and jeers with which his imaginary enemy istormenting him, while in the grated room off the cases, a poor fellow is rushing maily about, fighting a mortal combat with what seems to him a real enemy. The straight jacket and well padded walls, however, protect him from doing himself any harm, while the strong men, chosen as nurses for these patients, cow them down with a steady look, and preserve a Satanic order in this pandemonium. Public Parks. The authorities of Chicago have recently published an elaborate report on the ubject of public pleasure-grounds, giving the areas of the large parks of the cities of Europe and the United States. From these statistics it appears that Windsor Park, England, has 3,800 acres; Richmond, 2,408; Hampton Court and Burley, 1,812 acres. In London, Hyde Park has 389 acres; Regent's, 473 acres; Battersea, 175 acres; St. James; 55 acres; Kenlangton, 262 acres; and Green, 55 acres. Phonix Park, Dublin, has 1,752 acres; Birkenhead, Liverpool, has 182 acres, laid out under the direction of Sir Joseph Paxton. The Bois de Boulogne, near Paris, has 2,158 acres, 875 of which are open tur, 607 woods, 174 water, 365 acres in roads, 171 in nurseries and flower beds. The Thiergarten at Berlin comprises 200 acres. The Tzarskoe Selo summer garden at St. Petersburg consists Paradise Lost.

The story of "Paradise Lost," which may be new to some readers, is briefly as follows: It was Milton's life-long ambition to write a great work that his country would not willingly let die, and he doubtless thought, during the troublous times of the civil war, that his fondly cherished hopes were baffled; that he had indeed been born an age too soon; that he had fallen upon evil days and evil tongues; but when peace smiled again upon his native land, he turned his attention to the selection of a subject. Before he determined on his long philosophical poem, he appears to have ranged through history in quest of a topic of sufficient interest and capability, and to have dwelt for a time fondly on King Arthur. At last, he reached a point beyond which it was impossible to go. Milton's choice was made, and "Paradise Lost" grew slowly into being.

The exact date when Milton—of whom the Bishop of Avranches wrote to Salma-sius, who had done him the honor of abusing him: "How can you occupy Barbour county, was thrown from a abusing him: "How can you occupy reaper on Saturday of last week, and had yourself with an object so insignificant one of his feet almost sawed off by the sharp knives of the machine. A shoe on tian poem is not known; but we do know that for many years, mostly under his own roof in Artillery Walk, or while sauntering through the streets of London, when Charles Stuart was amusing himself with his licentious court; when John Dryden was witnessing his own plays performed at the Globe Theatre; when poor Sam Butler was growing morose from neglect and ill usage; when the lively and garrulous Samuel Pepys was running about embalming notes for posterity, and when the Puritan poet's friend, Andrew Marvell, was interesting himself in his behalf—the plan was carried and resolved in the blind man's brain, till at length

he was able to exclaim:

*Give me my lyre! :I feet the stirrings of a gift divine: Within my bosom glows uncarthly fire, Lit by no skill of mine! By dictations of fifty to a hundred lines at a time the work was at last completed We have no accurate information as to the exact date when "Paradise Lost" was finished, but it was some time previ ous to the 27th of April, 1667, the day on which it was sold to Samuel Simmons, bookseller, for five pounds down, with a premium of five pounds more when thirteen hundred copies of the first edition were sold, and five pounds when thirteen hundred of the second should have been sold, and so on for successive editions, each edition to consist of 1500 copies. As originally published, the poem consisted of ten broks, and was sold at three shillings. The stipulated 1800 copies were disposed of before the 26th of April, 1669, on which day Milton signed a receipt for the second five pounds, which we have seen hanging in a neat frame on the walls of the famous breakfast room of Samuel Rogers. The remaining 200 copies do not appear to have sold so fast, as it was not until the year of Milton's death that a second edition was published. In the second edition the ten books are converted into twelve by a division of the seventn and tenih, and there were also some few alterations. A third edition appeared in 1678, and in December, 1690, Mrs. Milton parted with her interest in Paradise Lost for eight pounds, paid to her by Simmons; so that the total amount received by the poet and his family for this matchless work was twenty-seven pounds, or $140—less than Alired Tenny-son was recently paid by the publisher of a popular English periodical for writing > of the young bark of poplars, willows and several other trees. It may be transformed into an acid known as salicylate of potassa. This last substance will decompose spontaneously, and the products of the decomposition possess a strong rose flavor. The cheapest method of obtaining it is to take the oil of wintergreen (Ol. Gaultheriæ), which is comparatively low in price, and, by the way, the heaviest of all essential oils, and boil it with a solution of caustic potassa. The oil of wintergreen has acid properties, and has been proved to be similar in its nature to salicylous acid. The crystaline paste formed by this operation, separated from its mother lye, gives, upon distillation with water, rose water. Perfumers will, no doubt, take advantage of this .- Manufacturer and Builder.

Husband and Wife.

England is revising her laws in respect to property holding by married women. The wife is to be secured in her own property, and to be liable to the parish for the maintenance of her husband, as the latter of 350 acres.

In the United States, Fairmount Park, at Philadelphia, has 2,200 acres, and in at Philadelphia, has 2,200 acres, and in crusty old backelor of an editor says that the course of a year will be extended to 2,700 acres; New York Central Park contains 862 acres. In Baltimore, Druid Hill Park has 550 acres, and Patterson's Park 1255 acres. In Brooklyn, Prospect Park contains 550 acres. Boston Community Will hold up both hands for such a law."

Husbands in England are to be exempt to be a relief to a create Clinding the contracted accounts. from the debts the wife contracted previous to marriage. In Vermont the old practice with Yankee peddlers was to give unlimited credit to handsome girls, whose prospects for marriage were good. The husband and wife problems are struggling to settle themselves. In China they have long been settled—the husband owns his wife and works her as he works any other domestic animal.
