Yesterday afternoon, the Pittsburgh Teachers' Institute commenced its second annual session in the Hall of the Raiston school house, Penn street. Thenumber in attendance was quite large for the opening and promised well for the continuance of the sessions. At half past two o'clock, the Institute wes called to order by Prof. Luckey,

Every teacher should say, "I'll teach with a polish," and if they did that they would gain a character, a reputation and rise in the profession. To do this, however, there must he love for the work: behind every lation to the teachers work. He said the teachers calling was one of great rethe teachers calling was one of great re-sponsibility, and those who estgaged in it should take every opportunity to im-prove and fitly qualify themselves, for its duties.
