FINANCE AND TRADE, OFFICE OF PITTSBURGH GAZETTE, FRIDAY, Sept. 10, 1869. The money market was less stringent to day than yesterday, causing a rapid rise in bonds and stocks. Government bonds under large pur chases and coverings for short sales advanced about $\frac{3}{4}$ per cent. to-day, and 1881s and 5-20s of 1862 and 1865s advanced even above one per cent. The mills are well supplied and consequently the demand is light. Oats firmer but unchanged—45 in first hands and 48 to 50 in store. Rye dull at \$1,05 ble and prices having advanced at Lonselecture. ble and prices having advanced at London and Frankfort, the feeling became very bouyant here. Gold after opening at 135, and fluctuating at 135@1351/4, became suddenly strong and advanced to 135% under large purchases for covering remittances. It is in fact the recovery from the present low exchange rates that is keeping up gold, and the anxiety of the clique (SUCCESSORS TO HANNA, HART & CO.,) to get out of it in the best way possible before the large shipments of cotton and cereals will be felt on the exchange mar-Stocks are fast recovering, and the beginning of the week will open a regular bull campaign. The continued disbursments by the Government are very favorable to a general rise in stocks that are paying dividends, since the increased receipts are promising large dividends and an enhancement of all railroad property for the future. Money was very stringent but is easing up again. Business is dull, the fall season not having yet fully opened, but Messrs. DABNEY, MORGAN & CO., 53 people are in hopes that a fair business

PITTSBURGH MARKETS. OFFICE OF PITTSEURGH GAZETTE, FRIDAY, Sept. 10, 1869. Business generally is improving slowly and the resumption of navigation is calculated to produce a more cheerful feeling, and will no doubt tend somewhat to increase the volume of trade. It is more than likely that the receipts of grain. fruit and produce generally, by river, will be large for a time at least, as there are many points along the Ohio not accessible to Pittsburgh by rail. It is true the supply of almost everything in this market is fully up to the demand, and to increase the supply will tend to bring about lower prices.

OFFICE OF PITTSBURGH GAZETTE, FRIDAY, September 10, 1869. The oil market continues dull and staguated, with but little show at present of any immediate improvement. It would naturally be inferred that with ather unfavorable news from the east in regard to refined, and an increased production reported, that crude would reaken and decline, but this is not the case. It appears to be full as strong today as it was previously—no decline, and at this writing but little prospect of any. On the other hand, with a majority of our refineries closed, and, comparatively, insignificant shipments, it would naturally be inferred that refined would gather strength and advance but this is not the case. Prices are no better than last week, and, if anything, a shade lower to-day than yesterday.

Last year at this time, it is said, we were shipping at the rate of from 3,000 to 4,000 bbis per day, while this week the average will not be much over 1,000 to 1.200. It is said that there are over 200,000 barrels tonnage at Philadelphia and New York, but if this is the case, it does seem strange that exporters are not taking hold more freely, and passing strange, that in the face of all this, the market should be weak and drooping. To-day, for the first time in several months, there were no shipments; this being the case, the query very naturally comes up, if Philadelphia and New York want 200,000 bbls of refined oil, where are they going to get it?
