PETROLEUM MARKET.

OFFICE OF PITTSBUBGH GAZETTE, THURSDAY, Sept. 16, 1869.

There was a regular old fashioned flurry in the oil market to-day, the excitement being greater than during any preceding day for several months. Compared with yesterday, prices have still further advanced with a large volume of business in the aggregate, and the feeling upon the whole was decidedly "bullish;" late advices both from the east and Europe would indicate a mate-rial reduction in stocks, with a sharp demand for export, and holders generally are strong and appear very sanguine of still better figures. Private advices from Europe, considered perfectly relia-ble, state that the expeditions, recently, have been unusually large, and as a con-sequence, stocks at most of the leading foreign ports are very much reduced, and it is also alleged that the amount of oil sfloat is comparatively light; in con-firmation of this the still further advance at Antwerp, quoted to day at 57, is significantly pointed at, and it must be conceded, whether these statements are exaggerated or not, the market is much stronger in feeling than it has been for stronger in feeling than it has been for some time. On the other hand, it is as-serted that the present flurry will result in most if not all of the refining estab-lishments resuming forthwith, and in that case, a large increase in the ship-ments will follow. Indeed, it was as-serted that a large proportion of the serted that a large proportion of the crude sold to day was bought by refic-ers with that object in view; they ex-pect refined to still further advance, and that crude bought now will enable them in the future to sell at a profit.
