MY LITTLE WIFE. The following exquisite love story is by a poet celebrated in the July number of Blackwood-David Wingate, a collier from his ninth year: My little wife, often round the church rill, Sweet little, dear little, neat-footed Jane.

Walked slowly, and lonely, and thoughtful, until
The afternoon bell chimed its call o'er the plain;
And nothing beemed sweeter
To me than o meet her,
And tell her what weather 't was likely to be,
My heart the while glowing.
Thus elfah wish growing.
That all her affections were centered in me.

My little wife once ('tis strange, 'tis tine), bweet little, dear little, love troubled Jane,
bo deeply absorbed in her day dreaming grew,
The belt chimed and ceased, though she heard
'not its strain;
And 1, walking near hex
(May love ever cheer her
Who thinks; all such wanderings of sin void and free,)

Strove hard to persuade her

free.)
Strove hard to persuade her.
That He who had made her.
Had destined her heart-love for no one but me.

Had destined her heart-love for no one but me.

My little wife-well, perhaps this was wrong—
hweet little, dear little, warm-hearted Jane,
sot on the hill-sidettill her shadew grew long,
the strict of the preacher that thus could detain.

An proved so completely,
An proved so completely,
That none but poor Abditew her husband could be,
She smiled when I bressed her,
And blunhed when I knased her.
And owned that she loved and would wed none
but me.
