THERE are such general complaints of the bare faced frauds revealed in the returns of wealthy citizens for the income tax, that the Department has under consideration the propriety of ordering an dodging millionaire who heads the opposition ticket, but probably he regards it as a proof of that Radical oppression which he so fervently hates. He perhaps thinks $8,95, contributed to the "unexpended balance" in our State Treasury, quite enough of taxation for his limited means. So MANY rich men have contrived, like

Mr. PACKER, to avoid the payment of taxes on their incomes, that the Commissioner of Internal Revenue is disposed to order a complete reassessment.

He ought not to hesitate. A careful scrutiny into the returns of this class of men will show how many of them are worthy either of public position or of private confidence. Of course, there are many upright and otherwise excellent men among them; but there are also some of the other sort. Let a sifting be made, so that the honest may be distinguished from the dishonest.

this proposition will come up in the Common Council, and we earnestly hope and expect that its decision will accord with that already reached in the other body. All investigations heretofore made have concurred in the conclusion that the Allegheny is the true source of our water supply, and the almost unanimous vote for the COLEMAN site in the Select Council indicates that it is the most available spot, and is offered at a reasonable price. THE American Board of Commission ers for Foreign Missions will hold a convocation in the Third Presbyterian church of this city, commencing on Tuesday of next week, October 5th. This Board is one of the most conspic-

THE LUNATICS OF WALL STREET. Beyond the passing inconvenience to the interests of solid trade, in the interruptions resulting from the general excitement, we have no regrets to indulge and no sympathies to express for the victims of this latest frenzy of cupidity. The individual operators who have disregarded the cautions of experience, the plainest instructions of common-sense, and, in most instances, the palpable dictates of ommercial honesty, must bear the consequences for themselves. But something is due to the higher interests of society, to prevent, if possible, the recurrence of a condition of things which has for three days convulsed the financial centre of the country.

Considering the instantaneous effect of the announcement that only four millions of Government gold were about to be sold bona fide, and the cash paid for it on delivery, upon the wholly fictitious market of last week, we perceive that the gamblers, who were buying and selling, on paper, in sums of from one to ten millions, and to an amount, in the gross, for a single day's transaction, of over three hundred made an extraordinary effort, for the reamillions of dollars, were smitten as if by a stroke of lightning. That was the end of their game! It remained only to survey the field and to place the victims out of of determining with what result. Up to the the public sight. The Secretary of the Treasury has done simply his duty in the premises. Prevented by law from selling gold without notice, he gave that notice when it became evident that governmental interference could no longer be delayed. No in. telligent citizen doubts the propriety of his conduct in declining to interfere in the course of private commercial transactions, until it was rendered imperative by public considerations. Whether it would have been better for the Treasury and for the country, if he could have thrown large amounts on the market without notice, that is not the law. Until Congress shall otherwise order, this notice must be shall otherwise order, this house have been used of the strugging much sit was last week, and this Admin-given, as it was last week, and this Admin-istration is, throughout, in the hands of men who obey the law as they find it, the enjoyment of liberty for themand there may be an honest doubt as to the expediency of changing that law, when we see that this notice is of itself speculation, as it at the word. The Secretary has wisely and profitably exercised quite as large a discretion as the law may safely put within the reach of any Treasury official. We are not always certain of a BOUTWELL in that place. Fortunes made, and lost, in an hour, ruined speculators crazed or plunging into suicide, the movements of regular trade paralized, the financial transactions of an entire people temporarly blocked, a fever of excitement ending in a crisis of gengotten or remembered only as another proof of the fatal power of that accursed thirst for riches which has studded the world's history with the records of human frailty.

They have been making a great effort to disturb the political equilibrium of the working classes and the Government employes, but so far it has been uphill work. There is no doubt of the carrying of the city on the Republican ticket by from two to four thousand majority. It is very doubtful whether the Democrats will be able to bring out a full vote, on account of the recent disturbance in their camp, and the leaders themselves show evident signs of fear and trembling. Their greatest hopes are based upon a majority here.

THE Republicans should remember that in some respects the coming election is one of peculiar importance, and every vote should be polled. For instance, in 1871 the Legislature will have devolved upon it the duty of apportioning Pennsylvania both for Congressional and Legislative representation.
