FOREIGN NEWS AND RUMORS.

GOLDWIN SMITH returns to England this fall. At a recent funeral in Ceylon of an officer, the young widow cut off all her beautiful golden hair and placed it in the grave.

PAULINE NAPOLEON'S private secretary is a Spanish ex-priest, who left the church in order to get married to a beautiful French ballet-girl.

GENERAL AMABLE ESCALANTE died recently in Spain, and at his funeral the emblems of Masonry were publicly exhibited for the first time.

SOME Frenchmen think Napoleon's illness has all been got up for political purposes. He and the Empress were in constant communication during her trip to Alsace and they say the old emperor actually telegraphed two or three verses to her.

The French historian, M. H. B. Bordier, comes forward to the defense of William Tell, lately historically extinguished, by discovering a wonderful man in the twelfth century, by name William Tallo, which furnishes the latest light on this all-important topic.

The seals of penalties in Scotch Courts is somewhat peculiar. In the Dundee Circuit, the other day, an old woman was sent to prison eight years for stealing a petticoat and shawl, and the same punishment was given to a young man who had murdered his illegitimate child by pouring vitriol down its throat.

Leviathan, the astronomer, and one of the strongest reactionists in the French Senate, is said to have become a confirmed hypochondriac in consequence of the political reforms granted by the Emperor Napoleon, and which, he predicts, will result in the speedy overthrow of the Empire and the proclamation of the Red Republic.
