PETROLEUM MARKET. OFFICE OF PITTSBURGH GAZETTE, MONDAY, October, 4, 1869. The stagnation which has prevailed in the oil business for some time past still continues, and what is worse still, there are no signs of improvement. The market cannot be termed weak, notwithstanding it is dull, yet while the demand either for present or future delivery is by no meansurgent, the offerings are light, and there are but very few sellers at present prices. The trade appears to be in as bad a condition now as it was thirty days ago, and while there has not been much said about it recently, yet after all the great difficulty, the great and principal clog in the way, lies in the nned, as the former is much higher relatively than the latter. And instead of Crude getting easier and lower, it seemed to be even stronger and higher than it was last week, while, on the other hand, refined, is scarcely holding its own.

There is considerable complaint among the trade in regard to the difficulty in There is considerable complaint among the trade in regard to the difficulty in getting cars on our western roads, and, besides, it is claimed that freights are too high to enable refiners here to compete fairly or successfully with Cleveland and other points. All our Pittsburgh refiners ask is to be treated with that consideration which the nature of their case requires, no more, and to this they are certainly entitled.
