Fashion and Trade,

It is curious to notice upon what apparent trifles great commercial interests may turn. When hair powder went out: of isshion half a century or more ago, there were not a few bankruptcies in consary to the process of giving bell shapes to our beller, would be thrown out of gear. What would be done with the skirts on hand it is hard to say. We have seen vines trained to run over them; but there would be an over-supply, even of such ornamental gardening.

The British Court, when court fetes were in fashion, more than once relieved lepressed trade in certain branches, by balls or fetes, at which the articles suffering from want of demand were directed to be worn. The ribbon trade went sadly down when the small hats for ladies first came in, as there was no place for puffs of ribbon on the new hats. Now ribbons are at a premium again, for some that we see worn for belts and sashes, look as wide as silks for dresses. But the most marked incident in manutactures has been caused by the passion of young men and old for coarse woolens, "Cheviots." and American imitations. They certainly make up into very sensible business suits. In consequence of the demand, low grade American wools, of the second and even third class, have crept up into com-petition in price with the superfine. The late war introduced woolen fabrics into much wider use than they ever were before. It will be a pity if wool does not keep its place. It is said to be more healthy than cotton or linen, and at any rate should never have been so much disused as it was down to 1860. But fashions change constantly. Fine cloths, they say, are coming up again. There will be one advantage in this. The "million" will be more cheaply clad, when fashion takes its tax from the low grades. But we do hope our business men will, at least in business hours, still retain the serviceable suits which look as "They meant business." Let the fitness of things be consulted.

And as for the origin of the sattlesnake, the old men among the Cherokees relate a legend to the following effect:

A very beautiful young man, with a white face wrapped in a white robe, once made his appearance in their nation, and commanded them to abandon all their. old customs and festivals and to adopt a the Southern appetite for fashion. In answer to the prayer, s venomous snake was created and carefully hidden under a leaf by the side of fully hidden under a leaf by the side of the spring. The stranger, as usual, came there to drink, was bitten by the snake, and perished. The Cherokee nation then fell in love with the snake, and having asked the Great Spirit to distinguish it by some peculiar mark from all the other snakes in the world, he complied by transferring to its body the rattles which had made the chest of sacrigoe so mutical to the ear and so beautiful to the eye. to the ear and so beautiful to the eye.

> Oscillations of Railway Trains, Sir Charles Fox states his opinion that the oscillation of railway trains, more especially at high velocities, producing what is ordinarily called "gauge conting what is cussion," is caused in very great measure by the use of wheels, the tires of which are portions of cones instead of dylin-ders. It is well known to engineers that ders. It is well known to engineer the tires of railway wheels are generally coned to an inclination of one in twenty. It is considered that these were first introduced by Mr. George Stephenson, in the expectation of facilitating the passage of vehicles round curves by their adapting vehicles round curves by their adapting themselves through their, various diameters to the different lengths of the two rails on which they were running. This however, is not the case in practice. No advantage is found to arise in the use of conical wheels in passing round durves, and as much evil results therefrom on straight lines, Bir Charles has constructed anywards of 250 miles of railway abroad. upwards of 350 miles of railway abroad, in the rolling stock of which he has departed from the usual form of wheel, and has used only cylindrical ones, and he has been gratified with the satisfactory
