(By Telegraph to the Pittsburgh Gazette.) Louisville, October 14.—The members of the Convention were tardy today, and many failed to reach the Opera House during the session, which began at 12:30. There was barely a quorum present when President Filmore called the meeting to order, but a good many came in before the adjournment.

James W. Measley, of Virginia, Chairman of the Committee on Immigration submitted a report which was adopted after some discussion. The following is asynopsis of the report: The report was prepared to be presented to the Louis-ville Convention by the Committee on Immigration, raised by the Memphis Convention of May, 1869.

The report says that the population of the whole country was, according to the first census in 1790, very nearly equally divided between the North and South. According to estimates made, every foreign immigrant who settles in the country adds $1,500 to the national wealth. But to be clearly within the limits, your Committee will assume it to be $500 per head. The industrial capital of the North over and above the South, from immigration alone, has thus been increased by this enormous sum. The North has outstripped the South in the struggle for mineral wealth.

The object of your committee is to dedevise means which may enable the

A committee from the New York Ship Owners' Association was in attendance. The Meine ship builders' York Ship Owners' Association was in attendance. The Maine ship builders' interest was represented by Messrs. Hayden and Hichborn. On the part of the New York Ship Owners' Association, statements and arguments were submitted to prove that the remedy for the low condition of American shipping interests is in the repeal of the navigation laws and in permitting American ship laws, and in permitting American ship owners to buy ships in England, or any other foreign country, which they are now prevented from doing by the prohibition of American registry to foreign built vessels. That the amendment of the Internal Revenue so as to allow ship the Internal Revenue so as to allow ship stores to be obtained free of duty, as in Great Britain, would enable American ship owners to compete in the carrying trade with foreign vessels. They advocated, incidentally, the allowance of drawbacks to American chip builders in materials used in ships, and argued that thus in a few years American shipbuilders would be able to American shipbuilders would be able to produce either iron or wooden vessels as cheaply as they can now be produced on the Tyne or Clyde, while free trade in ships would give immediate relief to American ship owners, and prevent the monopoly of the carrying trade by foreigners.

On the part of the Maine ship building interests the argument was that the only remedy needed was the allowance only remedy needed was the allowance of drawbacks, and that to agree to the proposition of the New York ship owners Association, for free trade in ships would be the finishing blow to the ship building interests of the country. The Committee meets again to-day (Friday).
