A LECTURE on "Emperor Maximillian's Life in Mexico," was announced for Erie one evening last week by the Y. M. C. A., but the lecturer got on a "high," and was arrested and tombed. His engagement was canceled, but he delivered a splendid lecture on his own account to a slim audience. That lecturer is rather unfortunate in keeping his engagements.

THE pig iron makers of Columbia held a convention last week and endorsed a memorial to Congress, requesting that the present duties be raised one dollar per ton on bar iron, and three dollars per ton on rails, scrap, boiler iron, and all other descriptions of manufactured iron, and that a direct tax be imposed of one dollar upon all pig, bars, rails, plates, and other descriptions of iron manufactured in the country, to compensate for the loss of revenue on the importation of foreign iron.

AN effort is now being made in this State to abolish the employment of the gallows. Thus far the movement has excited but little attention, although a large number of petitions, mostly from Philadelphia, asking for its abolishment, have been presented to the Legislature. It is now said Morrow B. Lowry will advocate abolishment. Should'nt wonder that he would, as he must see whither he is drifting, and without gallows in the State his neck might be safely insured against all accidents.

CONSIDERABLE excitement just now prevails in Lehighton, concerning the recent developments of iron interests there and the probable early centreing of large improvements and heavy outlay of capital on account of it. The fact of the existence of iron in large quantities in that place is no notion or freak of imagination. There has been a thorough examination of the ground. The locality is about two miles west of town. On the surface is from two to three feet of paint of a vermillion color. The iron, besides being found quite largely in some spots upon the surface, is found in quantities that cannot, of course, be estimated, but surely indicated as almost exhaustless, at a depth of ten or twenty feet.

A CHAP has been interviewing the Williamsport ghost in the dark haunted house. He says: At "the witching hour" a low tread was heard in the hall—the step approached the door—the lock gently turned without the aid of a key—the door opened and a light burst, with the effulgence of the noonday sun, upon the vallant watchers! There, clothed in a curious mantle, stood the outline of what appeared to be a man. His countenance seemed serene, his eyes were apparently half closed, and gently raising his right hand, pointed at each one in turn; then a ghastly smile seemed to illumine his countenance, when he turned upon his heel, glided out of the room, the door closed, the bolt of the lock distinctly clicked, and the sound of his receding footsteps gradually died away and all was still! The correspondent proposes to "watch for the curious stranger again, and if anything remarkable occurs, will communicate it."

THE locksmith who altered the key with which the Berlin Schœppe opened the safe of Count Blakensee, was confronted on Saturday last, with Dr. Schœppe in his cell at Carlisle. On entering the cell the locksmith surveyed the persons present, until his glance finally fell on the prisoner. After examining him intently for some time the visitor exclaimed, "Yes, you are the man." When asked what he meant, he said: "You are the man who came to our workshop in Berlin, and had the key altered. You remember that you carefully pointed out the places for me to file off; that you asked me when the key would be done, and that I answered at three in the afternoon." Dr. Schœppe declared that he did not know the locksmith, and said with an earnest tone that his visitor would have to make good by an oath what he had uttered. The locksmith said he would do what his conscience required. Later the visitor said that he recognized Schœppe not only by his outward appearance, but by a certain peculiarity of voice, and that the prisoner had behaved in the same manner when first confronted with him before the examining magistrate of Berlin, as he did in the present interview. This makes the muddle more complete.

THE Lycoming Gazette says:

Below we give the letter found upon the body of Samuel Landoner, the unfortunate young man who destroyed his life with a pistol, at the City Hotel, on Wednesday morning. The letter had first been dated at Williamsport, but it seemed he had afterward decided to go to Scranton, and had erased Williamsport and substituted Scranton in its stead. We give the letter entire:

SCRANTON, Jan. 21, 1870.—Dear father, mother, sisters and bro's, farewell! I can live no longer. I am going to commit suicide to-day. Enclosed find pawn ticket for my watch and chain. I have along. You will have to write to the firm, telling them to send on the ticket, watch C. O. D., and send them the ticket, or the best way would be to go there and get it. Caution Willie not to follow in my footsteps, or if he does he will regret it. Give my love to Ettie Strause, Etie Spotts and Moso Isaacs. Please pay my debts to the boys and to Mr. Goldsmith, and let me have rest in my grave. Let me be buried only in a plain box, and I do not wish to have any but relatives at my funeral. Willie, the last favor I ask of you is to quit spending so much money, as that was what ruined me, and not go with companions that have more money to spend than you, as that will lead you to wish you had more yourself, and therefore you will try to get it, no matter how. Keep Henry out of harm's reach, as if he is not cared for he will be ruined also. Take good care of Maurice. Farewell! It is no use for me to live, as I will be nothing but a plague and cause of sorrow to you all. A thousand kisses to Julius and Clarence, and tell them that I will never come again to see them, and tell Julius that he must forget me, as I am not worthy of remembrance, even from the meanest cur living.

SAM. LANDOUER.

We have since learned that he ran away from home of his own accord, and probably became discouraged and ashamed, and resolved on suicide as the quickest, if not the most honorable and satisfactory way of terminating his troubles. A young man, sent by the parents, arrived here yesterday morning and took charge of the body. It was placed aboard the cars at 9:25 yesterday morning and taken home to his parents. We learn that the father is almost distracted by the tragic end of his boy.

FORTY-FIRST CONGRESS.

(SECOND SESSION.)

House in Session for General Debate—The National Debt and Repudiation.

(By Telegraph to the Pittsburgh Gazette.)

WASHINGTON, January 29, 1870.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

The House met for general debate, Mr. Churchill in the chair. Very few members were present.

Mr. CONGER submitted some remarks in reply to Mr. Dawes' attack on the Administration, in eulogy of President Grant and in favor of the free delivery of newspapers through the mails in counties where they are published.

Mr. WILLIAMS, of Indiana, made a speech against railroad monopolies and in favor of Government interference with railroads to prevent extortion in rates of transportation.

Mr. WILKINSON made a speech on the same subject, asserting that agricultural interests did not suffer near so much from the tariff and taxation as they did from the extortionate rates of transportation exacted by a railroad monopoly.

Mr. GOLLADAY made a speech in favor of the doctrine set forth in Mr. Mungen's speech before recess, a repudiation of the National Debt. Referring to Mr. Voorhees' speech of yesterday, he said he was not only edified but highly entertained at the remarks of his distinguished Democratic friend. He was captivated with his logic and struck breathless as it were at the gorgeous splendor of his imagination, depicting the horrors and wrongs and the injuries inflicted on the people by the bondholders. His logic, however, was not convincing. There was an inconsistency in much that he said, which if it could be reconciled with what he had said elsewhere, would wipe out the effect of two-thirds of his speech, and make his speech one directly in the interest of the repudiation theory, which he (Mr. Golladay) advocated to-day. If that speech proved anything, it proved that the contract did not bind the people, because they had not received any moral or legal consideration. He adopted his friend's argument in support of his own theory. His friend declared that he was not a repudiator, and yet the whole face of his figures and argument was to show the immorality and injustice of the bonded debt. No man could read the gentleman's speech, outside of that part of it which declared himself not a repudiator, and dream that he had not swapped places with himself.

Mr. VOORHEES—Can the gentleman appreciate the difference?

Mr. GOLLADAY declined to yield.

Mr. VOORHEES—Perhaps the gentleman does not appreciate the difference between paying what we owe and paying what we do not owe?

Mr. GOLLADAY—The gentleman made an argument in favor of repudiation, much better and stronger than I can hope to make. I adopt it. It was as good a speech for repudiation as I can desire. If the gentleman from Indiana submitted entirely to the naked question of contract, it was a plain case that the bond-holder held his bonds according to the legal contract. If he took other portions of the argument, that there was no consideration, that there was usury and extortion, then the gentleman was squarely upon his (Mr. Golladay's) platform, and that gentleman and the Democratic party were upon his platform, although they had not the courage to say so in the face of the country.

Mr. ELDRIDGE—The gentleman having made such a charge, will he now allow me a word?

Mr. GOLLADAY declined to yield.

Mr. ELDRIDGE—I must say that I consider the gentleman's course rather cowardly.

Mr. VOORHEES—So do I.

Mr. GOLLADAY—The gentleman has a right to form his own estimate of what constitutes cowardice, and if he so desire it, there are other theatres in which he may show his bravery, and other means by which he may testify, than by making such a statement.

Mr. ELDRIDGE—I only referred to cowardice in debate.

Mr. GOLLADAY—I return the words of the gentleman in the spirit in which they are offered. I presume he does not mean to impute cowardice to me. If he and the gentleman from Indiana mean to make such an imputation, I defy them, morally, socially, politically and intellectually.

Mr. ELDRIDGE—You don't show it.

Mr. GOLLADAY proceeded with his speech and claimed that Mr. Butler, of Massachusetts, was himself a practical repudiator, as announced in a speech of his in July, 1868, in which he (Mr. Butler) took the ground of equal taxation or repudiation.

Mr. BIRD followed in a speech against repudiation, dissenting from the views of Messrs. Mungen and Golladay.

Mr. ELDRIDGE took the floor and denied the right of the gentleman from Kentucky to charge him or his associates with standing on his (Mr. Golladay's) platform, without having the courage or manhood to assert it. He had never hesitated to declare the position which he maintained on these financial questions.

Mr. DAVIS desired to hear the gentleman state what that position was?

Mr. ELDRIDGE informed him if he would be patient he would hear it. Referring to his remark to Mr. Golladay, he said that remark did not call in question the physical courage of the gentleman, or his moral courage in debate. The Democratic party had expressed its views in no uncertain words on the question of currency and finance. The endorsement of the five dollar bill was that it was a legal tender for all debts, public and private, except duties on imports and interest on the public debt, and was receivable on all bonds and loans made to the United States. Was there any uncertain sound in that? Was there any want of courage in it? The venerable leader of the House, who had gone to his final rest, (Mr. Stevens, of Pa.) had declared in this House that it was a public crime to attempt to pay the debt in any other way.

Mr. VOORHEES remarked that he had heard Mr. Stevens declare on the floor of the House that he would rather vote for Frank Blair than vote for any man who construed that law to mean that the 5-20's were payable in gold; so instead of making war upon the Democratic side of the House, the other side ought to make war on Mr. Stevens, (as preachers sometimes said about the doctrine, that they did not like to make war upon Paul,) and not upon him, Mr. Stevens was their leader, and they should answer him. They should answer Senator Morton, of Indiana. They should answer Senator Sherman, of Ohio.

Mr. ELDRIDGE—And when they get through answering these, let them answer Benj. F. Butler.

Mr. VOORHEES—I beg that gentleman's pardon for not naming him. (Laughter.)

Mr. DAVIS—On that subject does the opposition adopt Mr. Butler as their leader?

Mr. ELDRIDGE—Not just that, but we never go against a correct principle because a bad man, or even the leader of the House, goes for it. [Laughter.]

The discussion was carried on for some time longer by Messrs. Eldridge, Niblack, Stevenson and Golladay.

Mr. CLEVELAND addressed the House against repudiation and against all attempts to pay off the debt quickly, and in favor of an expansion of the currency and of a general reduction of expenditures and taxation.

At 4:35 the House adjourned.

STATE LEGISLATURES.

ALABAMA.

MONTGOMERY, January 29.—The Senate consumed the entire day in discussing a memorial to Congress for the removal of political disabilities.

The House debated six hours over a resolution to expel Mr. Randolph, of Tuscaloosa, because of a letter he wrote to his paper concerning the Legislature. The debate will be continued Monday.

GEORGIA.

ATLANTA, January 29.—The Senate received a communication to day from General Terry, through the Governor, declaring two Senators elect ineligible and the seat of another vacant. A resolution was passed to give the seat to persons receiving the next highest vote. Two white men and ten colored men were sworn to fill the vacancies.

A special dispatch says that after the swearing in of the members of the House yesterday, the House proceeded to the election of a Clerk and minor officers. Newton, Republican, was elected Clerk by twenty-eight majority; Bentley, (colored) Messenger, by fifteen majority, and Lineberger, Doorkeeper, by eight majority. Much confusion prevailed in the House during the session. Mr. Bryant called Mr. Tweedy, his collegue from Richmond, a miserable liar, and after the adjournment Tweedy demanded a retraction and apology, which Bryant refused. Tweedy then struck him with a ratan walking stick, and Bryant fled into a house for refuge.

The Republicans held a very large mass meeting last night, and great enthusiasm was manifested.

LOUISIANA.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 29.—A resolution was to-day introduced into the Legislature inquiring whether Article 13 of the Constitution, relative to equality of citizens in steamboats, steamships and places of public resort, had been complied with. It was adopted.

Another resolution was introduced inquiring into the feasibility of selling the stock of the State and city in the New Orleans and Jackson Railroad.

The election bill to-day passed the Senate. The bill gives the Governor almost unlimited control of the elections in the State.

A mass meeting was held at the St. Charles Theatre. Five thousand persons were present and the meeting was very enthusiastic. The object of the meeting was to take steps to protect citizens against oppressive and unjust legislation. The meeting adjourned without definite action.

A call is published for a mass meeting of citizens, irrespective of party, at Lafayette Square, on Monday evening, to take into consideration the best means for the protection of the credit of the State and liberty of the people from dangerous and ruinous legislation with which we are threatened. Between three and four hundred persons have signed the call.

OHIO.

The will of the late Edwin M. Stanton was filed to-day in the Orphans' Court, and being proven, was admitted to probate. The will is quite short, being contained in one page of ordinary letter paper. CHICAGO, January 29.—The following dispatch containing the details of the victory of Col. Baker over the Piegan Indians, was telegraphed to Gen. Sherman to-night, by Lieut. Gen. Sheridan, from these headquarters.

Headquarters Military Division of the Missouri, Chicago, Jan. 29, 1870.—Gen. W. T. Sherman, Washington, D. C.: I have the honor to transmit the following dispatch, forwarded by Gen. Hancock, from Gen. De Trobiand, as further information on the subject of my dispatch this morning:

"The expedition was a complete success. Col Baker has just returned, having killed one hundred and seventy-three Piegans, destroying forty four lodges, with all their winter supplies, robes, &c., and captured over three hundred horses. The Bloods turned over all the horses taken from the white people which were in their possession. The most of the murderers and marauders of last summer are killed. Poe and Mountain Chief escaped with a few followers, leaving everything but their horses. There were on our side one man killed and another accidentally wounded by falling from his horse. Report by mail without delay."

This dispatch is transmitted verbatim.

A French war steamer had lost forty of her crew by yellow fever at Port au Prince.

THE PEABODY OBSEQUIES.

By Telegraph to the Pittsburgh Gazette.)

PORTLAND, January 29.—The Peabody obsequies were celebrated to-day. An immense crowd of people were present, business throughout the city suspended and flags on public buildings and shipping displayed at half mast. The Governor and Legislature of Maine were present and several military organizations, with bands of music &c. About noon the remains were debarked and received by Governor Chamberlain. Capt. Commerell, of the Monarch, made an appropriate speech, to which Governor Chamberlain replied. The procession then formed and the body was conveyed to the city hall. Notwithstanding a heavy snow storm the streets through which the procession passed were densely packed with people.

PORTLAND, Me., Jan. 30.—After the procession retired on Saturday, the Hall was opened to the public until eight o'clock P. M. A fine bust of Mr. Peabody was placed at the foot of the coffin, and a line of sentinels was drawn across the Hall, with one at each corner of the catafalque resting motionless upon his reversed musket. The Hall to-day has not been open, but is guarded by State troops.

The ship of war Benicia arrived on Saturday just as the naval display was closing. The Maine Legislature returned in special train to Augusta on Saturday evening.

—The Tennessee Constitutional Convention on Saturday adopted an amendment limiting the regular session of the Legislature to seventy-five and called sessions to twenty days.

Naval Ceremonies at Portland.

PORTLAND, Jan. 27.—The only ceremonies to-day, in connection with the arrival of Mr. Peabody's remains, has been the official visit of Admiral Farragut to Capt. Commerell.

As soon as his vessel was seen leaving the dock, the whole fleet beat "to quarters." The marine guards filed out on deck, and the yards of the Monarch and the Plymouth were fully manned, the former vessel sending aloft nearly 200 men. The Admiral and the Governor, with their respective staffs, put off from the Leyden in a smaller tug, and went on board the ship a little sooner than the rest of the party. Capt. Commerell received them with due ceremony at the gangway, the marines presenting arms, the bugle sounding a flourish, and the band of the ship playing the National airs, while the guests passed down the long line of officers who stood drawn up in imposing array; all wearing their showy full dress uniform, with chapeaux, side arms, and white kid gloves.

Capt. Commerell, a courteous and vivacious gentleman of middle age, has won distinction in the service, for he wears the "Victoria Cross," and is a "Commander of the Bath." The Admiral spent a long time with him examining the ship, and in particular studying the peculiarities of the guns and defensible armor. The turrets were set in motion, the machinery for loading, raising, and depressing the guns, was tried, and caps were exploded to show the peculiar method by which both pieces in a turret can be discharged at once.

The Mortuary Chapel was, of course, visited. Its appearance was far more impressive this morning than when I first saw it. A rich velvet pall was thrown across the lower half of the coffin, natural flowers were spread about the steps of the platform, the candles were all alight, and at the head two sentries, a sailor and a marine, with averted faces, leaning upon their muskets.
