A Glorious Drunk, Nelson M. Wells was before the Mayo Saturday on a charge of larceny by ballee. It appears that John Bell, who is the owner of a horse and wagon, bo-came engaged in an interesting game of cards in a saloon in the Diamond, Satur-afternoon on the Cleveland & Pittiburgh of Railroad, at or near Courtney's Sta. I kin, in Ohio township. The unfortunate man, it appears, was walking on the north track going west, and hearing a train whistle behind him, sicepped to the other track. A freight train was coming a up the north track at the time, but his attention having been drawn to the other train; he did not observe it. The engineer of the freight train gave of the salarm and reversed his engine but was no near the man that it was moneast the man that it was moneast to stop the train before the engine atruck him. He was knocked a down and the engine passed over one log and one arm, both of which were fractured and five ribs were broken. Dr. Ruchanan was summoned and rendered rill the assistance possible, but it was impossible to save the man's life.

The jury returned a verdict in secondance with the above facts.

O'Neal was somitble when the Doctor arrived and stated to him how the seed. I dent occurred. He alse said he resided in Buffalo, N. Y., and that he was on his way to Cleveland.

Hall's Journal of Health gives the following account of a man in New York, who never dined without his brandy BALLOU & ADAMS, and water, nor went to bed without an oyster or forzypin supper, and who was never known to be drunk: "Months before he died—he was a year in dying—he could eat nothing without distress, and at death the whole alimentary canni was a mass of disease; in the midst of his millions he died of inantitoi. He had been a steady drinker for twenty-eight years," Now, a man with a stomach as tough as one of Liebler's famous trunks could not stand such a mode of living. But while the poor glutton is dead we will lot him pass and speak a few words on the merits of Liebler's trunks, which are known and recognized as articles of superior quality.
