The Governor is himself on trial before the people of Pennsylvania. The issue has been joined, on this billto plunder the sinking fund. On one side stand the people, upkelding their Constitution. The highest Court of the State is with them The law and the facts surround them impregnably. And the Governor knows these things to be so. On the other hand stand neare but the adroit, unscrupulous and untiring agents of a few great-corporations. Neither the people, the Court, the law nor the facts are on that side. That railway ring stands alone. And the Governor knows that too. On which its Governor knows that too. On which its Governor knows that too. On which its great content in the content in the configuration of the side, now, will be east his lot?

We shall take the liberty to say to Governor Geary that, if he signs that bill, the people of Pennsylvania can have but one or spinion of his motives, the inducements the ball those to suffered himself to be controlled.
