We prist as interesting and important comment in another column. It is a shifted in the possibility of all the votes is the Pollucial treader; in defense a shading in the possibility of all the votes is the Pollucial treader; in defense and the pollucial treader; in defense and the corrupt plots which are standing of the Commonwealth, for the beneated of the Commonwealth, for the Department of the Commonwealth, for the Department of the Commonwealth, for the Commonwealth, Commonwealth, for the Commonwealth, C are most anxious to escape from its infliction.

Nevertheless, it is a species of direct taxation, which will always be unpopular. Men like to pay taxes in an indirect way, and whenever the Government reels that it can maintain its credit without the "income tax," we shall join heartly in the cry for its repeal. We think that it will be silowed to die out after the collections of this year, and, so far as we are personally interested, we hope it will, but still we cannot join in the declaration that it is an unjust or unfair tax. If the credit of the Government is not maintained there will be no income to tax, and we prefer to make an income, and the larger our income the larger tax and the larger is is the better we are able to pay it.—Ball.
