The Day Elsewhere.

20th of May is destined, for ages, to ne con-secrated as a body bolidry, chosen as a mem-orial of those who have indelibly scaled the freedom won by their sires, with their life blood. On such a day it is not appropriate to fire Chinese crackers, and discharge fire works, it is not a day for pyrotechnical relocing; but one which the tear's of memory should mois-ten. Yet not altogether one of woe, for we can not but remember, even while gazing on the massleums of our failen brayes, that, besides as immortality for themselves, they have you

Of commemorating in marble the heroid deels of the four thousand who found soldiers graves while battling for the nation, was first suggested by Gen. Februan shortly after the close of the war. It was immediately acted upon by a number of geatleasen, and on August 25, 1805, a Phanace Committee, consisting of Messrs. Pearson. Gormly. Brown. Sellers. Watt. Jones and Turner met at Merit's banking house and organized the soliciting campaign. Wounded soldiers were at first employed to cantass, receiving a slight percentage on contributions. They were aided by appeals from the pulpit and individual efforts of the committee, that shall be received a first employed to cantass, receiving a slight percentage on contributions. They were aided by appeals from the pulpit and individual efforts of the committee, but after hard till for several modifies has a pout only netted $1.500.

A new plan was then copadered, the ladies were interested, and the Monamental Association, with Mrs. Samuel McKee as President, was the result. Our readers are familiar with the Fair which followed and the dangelal success which attended it, outsing the treasury to be repleatable to the amount of $25,000. This was put out at interest, Mr. James Park. The being choosen Treasurer of the Association, was the next consideration, and there were many who supposed this could be settled and the work commenced the medical selected. The people didn't want that, and expressed themselves to declarations and the work commenced themselves of the commenced themselves and the work commenced themselves and the content of the commenced themselves are declared in favor. The credit of this belongs to Mr. Charles Davis of Allegheur, who advocated this in a series of letters, one of which, published in the Gazarret, and the voice of the people.
