The Atmospheric and its Effects upon Life.

A very interesting lecture was delivered by Dr. Griscom at the New York Mechanies' Institute, on the 'Influence of Air in connection with Animal Life.'that they lived at the bottom of an immense ocean of air fifty miles deep; yet corulean blue. To preceive this it was necessary to be able to see at once the trial. whole volume, and also on a calm and clear day, for no color could be perceived sample AND MARKEN MISS. if seen in small quantities, or when there was either wind or haziness. In like manner the color of water could not be seen in small quantities, and was only perceptible where there was a vast expanse of ocean. The air was also a substance capable of condensation and expansion. Its expansion was seen in the winds, by which ships were made to traverse the ocean, and also in windmills. The tornado was another phase of its expansion, by which trees were uprooted and houses overturned, and was almost equal to the power of steam. The greatest weight of the atmosphere was fifteen pounds to the square inch, and this weight wards, the lecturer exhausted the air out ble terms. of a large vase, which then remained fast to the plate on which it stood, but on the air being let in, it was easily removed .-I remember, said he, being asked the question, if there is a pressure of fifteen nounds to the square inch, the reason why we were not at once crushed by the weight; but this is, as I before explained, work. because the air presses in all direction Strondsburg, March 17, 1853. with the same equal force, and hence there is an equilibrium. Whaterer concerns the happiness and ealth of a people is at all times of the most valuable importance. I take it for granted hat every person will do all in their power, to save the lives of their children, and that every person will endeavor to promote their own health at all sacrifices.
