A destructive fire at Pittsburg, Pa. broke out on Monday afternoon in the drug-store of B. A. Fahnestock, corner of Wood and Front-streets, which was entirely destroyed with its contents, valued at $70,000, of which $50,000 were insured. Several adjoining buildings were also more or less damaged.

Freak of an Old Man.

Quite an excitement was created in Providence, R. I., on Tuesday last, in consequence of a strange freak of an old man Stroudsburg, March 30, 1854. named Lyman Hawes. The track of the Providence and Worcester Railroad runs through land which formerly belonged to him, and the price of this land had been Window Sash, painted and glazed, of al assessed by commissioners at a valuation sizes. which he refused to accept. On Tuesday he placed a small house erected by himself upon both tracks, in which he put several kegs which he said contained powder, and then fastened himself inside by under the firm of Noves, Phelps & Co. nailing up every entrance to it.

The Boston and Providence train and the Providence and Worcester train were, as they came along, brought to a standstill by the obstruction and detained for August 16, 1854. nearly two hours.
