Horrors of Indian Warfare.

The following account of a desperate fight with a party of Indians, copied from the San Antonio (Texas) Ledger, calls to stances of undaunted courage :

"On Saturday evening, June 30, some fifteen Indians surrounded the house of Mr. Westfall, who is well known to most of our citizens, and who lives on the Leona, some thirty-five miles below Fort Inge, and in this county. The attack was made upon Mr. Westfall while he was ab- pills, bills, plasters, and drugs to their sent from the house, leaving at the time no occupants in it but a Frenchman named Louis and a large dog. The of the legislative authority of Kansas, faithful dog, on seeing Louis fall and the blood streaming down from his body, became frantic with rage, and, rushing out a small aperture, sprang upon the Indians, seized one, and tore every garment from his body, and was on the eve of killing him when he was shot and overpowered by the demons in human shape that surrounded him. Westfall, overpowered by the loss of blood, could only support himself now by holding to the walls of the house; but nothing daunted, he tore a large sperture in the wall and stuck his gun out, in order to keep up appearances.

And yet the mortality has not been as great as in was here; nor as in 1832, when the cholera prevailed among us. Twelve deaths a day are not more than the average now; twenty-five and thirty were the average then. Yet the people then pursued their usual avocations as if there was no pestilence, and poverty and distress were relieved by private charity. Now all business is suspended, and but for the Howard Association people would starve in the streets. Is life more preciovs now than formerly, or are men more timid ? But
