

Railroad Villages.

The villages that are springing up along the lines of railroad every day are comparatively a recent feature in village building. They usually begin with a depot, followed by a post office, a blacksmith's shop, and the contents of a couple of pedlar's packs duly distributed upon half a dozen shelves, and there they are born, and christened, and waiting to grow. The train runs to and fro, and the passengers see the little group clustered round the track, and wonder what they do there, and why they do not go on with the train. By-and-by houses get to be an epidemic, and up they go, here and there, and all about. Streets are staked and lots are measured, and a public square is reserved, and a young lawyer, and "stated preaching" once in two weeks. That's a pretty good beginning, but it's only a beginning. A young sophomore, out of funds, and looking for a place to teach a winter school, gets off a straggling train some day. Everybody knows he is there. He reached there at two o'clock, and at a quarter past three everybody knows who he is, and the Squire sees him, and the Doctor shows him round the town, waves his hand toward the prairie and toward the town, and dilates upon its resources and pronounces a eulogy upon its enterprise, and the young man is charmed, and over the store he climbs at once, up one flight of stairs into a "high school."

Things go on bravely, and a public-spirited individual, who, as he says, has more room than he wants, gets the painter—for meanwhile such an artisan has taken passage in the village en route to greatness—to emblazon his name in very black letters, upon a very broad board, and there is a general rejoicing at the new "hotel," where the lawyer argues with the storekeeper nightly, while the doctor completes the triangle, upon the destinies of the world in general, and Depotdom in particular.

What they lack now is a newspaper.—By-and-by an old press is for sale in a neighboring town, and a "tramping jour" has stranded upon their beach, and the lawyer promises to write some of their leaders, the doctor will contribute their obituaries, the schoolmaster do the puzzles and the poetry, while the blacksmith and the merchant promise to be liberal in the way of advertising. The paper appears; like the village, it is small, but with the village it grows.

The trains used to whistle and ring, and barely slacken their speed. Now they stop altogether, for there are now more to get off and more to get on. The tavern-keeper takes a state map of a pedlar, who happens to be his guest over a rainy Sunday, and discovers that Depotdom is the geographical centre of the county. There is an immediate agitation. The seat of justice, herself, scales and all, must be removed thither. They work at it, electioneer about it, bid for it, and get it.

Now the huddle is a village; now the village is a town; now the town is a shire-town; now the shire-town is a city. The blacksmith's shop has grown into a half dozen factories; the lawyer is multiplied by ten, and the doctor by six, and the storekeeper knocks down his prices ten per cent. to compete with nineteen newcomers. And all this is accomplished through the agency of railroads and locomotives, within the space of two or three years.—The lawyer is a county judge, the doctor has grown rich, the blacksmith is mayor, and the sophomore is married and settled. They have a lyceum and a library, and a little daily that regales its readers with a whole column of city items. How they talk of "our city"; they are no longer villagers and pagans—they are citizens.

A Controversy with Gen. Scott.—According to a Washington correspondent of the New York Times, Secretary Davis is engaged in a correspondence or controversy with General Scott. It seems that some time since General Scott gave General Hitchcock leave of absence for six months. The Secretary of war immediately wrote to General Scott, demanding his reasons for this act, and at the same time countermanded the General's order, granting leave of absence.—The Secretary's letter was quite as sharp in its tone as it was insulting in its tenor.

General Scott replied that he had granted the leave of absence because he had a right to do it, and was convinced of its propriety—that he was not responsible to the Secretary of War for his action in such cases, and that he would be obliged to him if he would hereafter, in any official communications he might have occasion to address him, write in the name and by the authority of the President of the United States—as he was the only official superior whom he acknowledged. The General's letter was quite as sharp as the Secretary's.

Secretary Davis, in reply, entered into a very elaborate and detailed exposition of all the alleged breaches of order and violations of propriety committed by General Scott during his whole military career! The correspondence is already quite voluminous, and is not yet closed. It will undoubtedly be communicated to Congress at the opening of the session. If not, it will be called for by a special resolution.

Flour is reported to be retailing in many of the towns in Genesee county, at from four to five dollars per barrel; notwithstanding it sells in N. Y. city for about double the amount.

Notice is hereby given, to all persons indebted to the late firm of Miller & Fowler, to call on either of them and settle their accounts, between this and the first of Jan. 1856, or they will be placed in the hands of some one for collection after that time.

A VALUABLE LUMBER PROPERTY FOR SALE. The subscriber will offer his property at public sale, on Friday, the 19th day of October next. The favorable location of this property and the great facilities it possesses, both as a retail and shipping lumber establishment, is known to most persons in this neighborhood. It is situated on Mud Run, in Carbon county, seven miles from the Lehigh Navigation, and nine miles from the Wilkes-Barre Pike, on the road leading from Merwinburg to White Haven. It consists of about 1500 Acres of Timber Land, containing Pine, Spruce, Hemlock and Hard Wood, and one of the best single SAW MILLS in the Pine Swamp, entirely new, and capable of manufacturing one million feet, or more, of lumber per annum. Also, Four good Dwelling Houses, Store House and Smith Shop, with stabling sufficient for 40 horses. There are also about 20 acres cleared land, in a good state of cultivation. The water power is never failing, and there is on the property a very favorable location for an extensive tanning establishment, with an immense bark region surrounding it.

To any business, this property affords a rare opportunity. Persons wishing to view the property can have an opportunity of doing so in company with the subscriber, or with Wm. K. Snyder, who is on the property, any day before the sale, at which time the terms will be made known. MORRIS EVANS, Albrightville, Carbon Co., Pa. September 24, 1855. Mauch Chunk Gazette and Bucks Co. The Scientific American. ELEVENTH YEAR. Splendid Engravings and Prizes.

The Eleventh Annual Volume commences on the 17th day of September, 1855. The "Scientific American" is an illustrated periodical, devoted chiefly to the promulgation of information relating to the various mechanical and chemic arts, industrial manufactures, agriculture, patents, inventions, engineering, millwork, and all interests which the light of practical science is calculated to advance. Reports of U. S. Patents granted are also published every week, including official copies of all the Patent claims, together with news and information upon thousands of other subjects.

The contributors to the Scientific American are among the most eminent scientific and practical men of the times. The editorial department is universally acknowledged to be conducted with great ability, and to be distinguished, not only for the excellence and truthfulness of its discussions, but for the fearlessness with which error is combated and false theories are exploded. Mechanics, Inventors, Engineers, Chemists, Manufacturers, Agriculturists, and people of every profession in life, will find the Scientific American to be of great value in their respective callings. Its contents and suggestions will save them hundreds of dollars annually, besides affording them a continual source of knowledge, the experience of which is beyond pecuniary estimate.

The Scientific American is published once a week; every number contains eight large quarto pages, forming annually a complete and splendid volume, illustrated with several hundred original engravings. Specimen copies sent gratis. Terms.—Single subscriptions, $2 a year, or $1 for six months. Five copies, for six months, $4; for a year, $8.
