As required by law, I directed the certificates and evidences of this indebtedness to be cancelled; and on the 19th of September, 1857, issued my proclamation declaring the payment, extinguishment, and final discharge of $1,012,857.64 of the public debt.

In addition to the amount reported to be in the Treasury to the credit of the sinking fund, and applicable to the payment of the public debt, the commissioners of the fund now hold the sum of $7,500,000 bonds of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, pledged by the law to the payment of the funded debt of the Commonwealth.

By the 4th section of the 11th article of the Constitution, as amended and ratified by a majority of the qualified voters of the State, at the general election held on the second Tuesday of October, 1857, it is made the duty of the Legislature, at its first session after the adoption of this amendment, to create a sinking fund which shall be sufficient to pay the accruing interest on the present public debt, and any additional debt thereafter constitutionally contracted, and annually to reduce the principal thereof by a sum not less than $250,000, which sinking fund shall consist of the net annual income of the public works from time to time, owned by the State, or the proceeds of the sale of the same, or any part thereof, and of the income or proceeds of sale of stocks owned by the State, together with other funds or resources that may be designated by law. The said sinking fund may be increased from time to time by assigning to it any part of the taxes or other revenues of the State, not required for the ordinary and current expenses of Government, and unless in case of war, invasion or insurrection, no part of said sinking fund shall be used or applied otherwise than in extinguishment of a public debt, until the amount of such debt is reduced below the sum of $5,000,000."

This being the first session of the Legislature since the adoption of this amendment, the duty therein enjoined devolves upon you, and should be promptly and faithfully discharged.

The funded and unfunded debt of the State, including temporary loans, on the 1st day of December, 1856, as per reports of Auditor General and State Treasurer, was as follows, viz:

Decrease during the fiscal year, $20,097 55

These statements exhibit the gratifying fact, that during the past fiscal year, the public debt has been reduced eight hundred and twenty thousand, ninety-seven dollars and fifty-five cents. During the same period large appropriations and payments were made on account of our public improvements, for old and unsettled claims adjusted under the act of last session, and for other extraordinary purposes.

The condition of the Treasury prior to the suspension of specie payments by the Banks, justified the appropriation of at least two hundred thousand dollars more in payment of the public debt, and arrangements were made by the Treasurer, under the direction of the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund, to liquidate that amount; but after the suspension, and the consequent financial embarrassment of the country, the proposed payment, from prudential motives, was postponed. Had this payment been made, in addition to the payments already reported, the statements and final extinguishment of the public debt would thus far have been sustained by their actual verification.

The causes that prevented their realization, it is believed, will soon cease to afflict, and the revenues of the Commonwealth, that has ever characterized the American people—aftering for a moment, but not dissipated by the adverse circumstances that surrounded us—rouse to more vigorous action by disaster and defeat, our progress cannot long be checked, nor our prosperity long be interrupted. Confidence, the sensitive, yet powerful agency, that binds in unity and strength, the great financial, commercial and industrial interests of our country and the world, has been suddenly impaired, producing financial and commercial distress, and affecting the revenues of the Commonwealth; but with the advantages resulting from the rapid development of our resources during the last quarter of a century—the immensely valuable increase of our agricultural, mining and manufacturing industry during the same period—the abundant harvests of the past year—our completed improvements, and all the elements of material wealth in our midst—restoration at an early period is not improbable. Returning confidence will be the herald of returning prosperity. Notwithstanding, then, the present embarrassment and gloomy condition of the country, after a careful consideration of the present and prospective condition of the finances and resources of the Commonwealth, I cannot hesitate to re-affirm my belief, "that the time is not far distant when Pennsylvania will stand redeemed from the oppression of her public debt, and her people be relieved from a taxation imposed to meet its accruing interest and maintain the faith and credit of the Commonwealth," and that "by practising strict economy in all departments of the Government—avoiding extravagant expenditure—refusing to undertake any new schemes of internal improvement, and holding to a rigid accountability the receiving and disbursing agents of the State, the realization of these views may be anticipated with confidence."

As corroborative of the opinion now and heretofore expressed, a brief review of the operations of the Treasury during the past three years, as connected with the payment of the debt of the Commonwealth, may not be inappropriate. In my first annual message to the Legislature the fact was stated, that during the three years intervening between December 1, 1851, and December 1, 1854, the public debt had been increased $1,584,359 31; and that the total debt at the close of the fiscal year, December 1, 1854, was $11,693,593 74. At the close of the late fiscal year, December 1, 1857, three years later, the funded and unfunded debt, as before shown, was $399,881,738 22; a decrease in three years, $1,816,857 52.

Thus in three years the public debt had been decreased, by actual payment and without resorting to the expedient of temporary loans, $1,816,857 52. If to this be added the sum $414,920 29, now in the sinking fund, and applicable to the payment of the funded debt, the reduction will be $2,231,777 81.

These facts are not only gratifying, but encouraging. It has already been stated that there is in the Sinking Fund the sum of $7,500,000—bonds of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, bearing interest at the rate of five per centum per annum, payable semi-annually, and pledged to the payment of the funded debt. If this sum be added to the reduction before stated, we have presented to us a virtual, if not an actual decrease, of the State debt of $9,731,777 81; showing the total funded and unfunded debt of the State on the first day of December, 1857, to have been $31,966,818 41.

In anticipation of the sale of the Main Line and the decrease in the public debt, the State tax, by an act of the last regular session was reduced from three to two and one-half mills on the dollar; a reduction equal to one-sixth of the tax imposed for State purposes prior to that act. These facts speak for themselves. Well may the people be congratulated on such auspicious beginning in the process of liquidation, and well may they with confidence anticipate the day of their deliverance from State taxation. Financial and commercial embarrassment may postpone—nothing but unwise legislation and the imprudent or dishonest management of our finances can prevent the early realization of their well-founded anticipations.

The condition of the public works, their general operation, the receipts and expenditures during the past fiscal year, will be presented to you in detail in the report of the Canal Commissioners.

The total receipts at the Treasury, from the public works, for the year ending November 30, 1857, including receipts from the Main Line up to the first day of August last, were $1,309,599 62. The aggregate expenditures for the same period were $1,312,705 67; the expenditures exceeding the revenues $4,107 05.

The receipts at the Treasury from the several divisions were as follows, viz: Main Line to Aug. 1, 1857 $796,550 33 Susquehanna and North and

West Branch Divisions 287,718 95 Delaware Division 224,329 34

The receipts from the Delaware Division are less than those of the previous year. The completion of rival railroads and other causes have lessened the receipts from this important division of our public works, and it is feared will continue to decrease them. Its management has been satisfactory, and compared with other divisions of the public improvements, economical. The net revenue at the Treasury, was $174,001 87, a decrease of $90,093 53, as compared with the receipts of the preceding year. In addition to the ordinary expenditures, the sum of $46,263 was paid for the enlargement and improvement of this division.

The North Branch Extension of the Pennsylvania Canal, although so far completed in the fall of 1856, that boats freighted with coal and other products were successfully passed through its entire length from Pitt-ton to the Junction Canal, yet in consequence of a large portion of the "Horse Race Dam" having been carried away by the freshet of last spring, business on the canal was suspended the greater part of the year. It was repaired during the summer, and in the fall business was resumed along its entire length. Soon after, the same dam was again extensively injured by a sudden and heavy freshet, and the greater part of the canal rendered useless for business. An appropriation will be required to reconstruct the dam.

This canal, although useful and valuable, appears to be doomed to failure and disaster. These are the fruits of former mismanagement and fraud in its construction. Every effort has been made to repair the errors of its early management, and to complete and render useful this division of our public works. Under proper management it can be successfully accomplished.

Pursuance of the act of 16th day of May, 1857, providing for the sale of the Main Line of the public works, after giving the notice required by law, I caused the said Main Line to be exposed to public sale at the Merchants' Exchange, in the city of Philadelphia, on the 25th day of June last, and sold the same to the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, for the sum of $7,500,000, the highest price bid for the same, and the minimum price fixed in the act.

After a full compliance by the purchasers with the condition of the act authorizing the sale, and the delivery of their bonds, in number and for the amounts equal to and falling due at the time provided for the payment of the respective instalments, the Secretary of the Commonwealth, on the 31st of July, A. D. 1857, as directed by the act, transferred, under the great seal of the State, to the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, their successors or assigns, the whole of the Main Line of the public works between Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, together with all the right, title, and interest, claim and demand, of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, in all property, real, personal, and mixed, belonging to or used in connection with the same by the Commonwealth; and the purchasers having given notice of their readiness to take possession of the said works, possession of the same was accordingly delivered to the company on the first day of August last, of which notice was given to all superintendents and agents of the Commonwealth by proclamation, bearing date the 31st day of July, 1857, as required by the law authorizing the sale.

The bonds of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, in the sum of $7,500,000 were received by the State Treasurer, and are held by him for the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund; the entire proceeds of the sale being required by the 12th section of the act to be paid to the Sinking Fund and applied to the payment of the State debt.

I cannot forbear congratulating the people of the Commonwealth on the consummation of this sale. Public sentiment as expressed through the ballot-box, and in other forms equally significant demand it—public policy and the interests of the Commonwealth required it. It is done. The many approve, few complain; those most who have gained an unenviable reputation by a reckless disregard of the public interests, as exhibited in the extravagant, useless, and fraudulent expenditures of the public money for selfish or partisan purposes.

The sale of the Main Line has directed public attention to the importance and necessity of disposing of the remaining divisions of the public improvements. The reasons and policy that required and justified the sale of the one, apply with equal force to the sale of the other. The propriety of separating the State from the care and control of the public works is not only evident to all who have given the subject a candid and impartial consideration, but the necessity is clearly established by the history of their construction and management. They have failed to be a source of revenue to the Commonwealth and if retained by the State, will require an expenditure in their repair and management largely exceeding any revenue that under the most favorable circumstances, can be derived from them. In any phase of the question this separation is desirable, but in connection with the payment of the public debt, and the reduction of State taxation, it becomes an object of more than ordinary interest. A sale at the earliest practicable period, of the whole of our public works, for a fair consideration, upon terms just and liberal to the purchasers, and at the same time amply protective of the rights and interests of the people, should be authorized by the Legislature. Such sale, with the application of the proceeds to the payment of the public debt, would secure its still more rapid extinguishment. The subject is recommended to your unbiased consideration.

The law incorporating the Pennsylvania Railroad Company imposed a tax of three mills per ton per mile, on all tonnage passing over that road, as an equivalent for any decrease in the revenue of the Commonwealth, that might arise from the anticipated competition of the road with the business of the Main Line of the public improvements. This tax is not imposed upon the company, but upon all tonnage, and it is paid by the owners of the freight transported over the road, the company acting as agents in its collection and payment to the State. It is virtually a tax upon the trade and commerce of the Commonwealth, and upon the commerce of other States whose productions seek an eastern market over this road; and thus by increasing the rate of charges and the cost of transportation, with the produce of the West is forced upon the competing railroads of other States; and to other markets than our own. The necessity that required this tax, as regards the Commonwealth and her improvements has ceased. Its continuance can only be justified as a revenue measure. It should be the policy of the State to invite the transmission of the products of other States through her territory to her own markets, and, therefore, the propriety of relieving the trade and business of the Commonwealth and country from this tax upon it is respectfully submitted for your consideration.

In consequence of the suspension of specie payments by the banks of this and the other States of the Union, and the financial embarrassment and general prostration of business, I deemed it my duty to call, as authorized by the Constitution, an extra session of the Legislature, to meet at Harrisburg on the sixth day of October last. Although the relief bill provided by this extraordinary session of the General Assembly was not as ample as the exigency of the case required, yet it was productive of many beneficial results, and served to allay the intense excitement and alarm that pervaded the entire community. By the act providing for the resumption of specie payments by the banks, all banking institutions accepting the provisions of that law were required to pay into the Treasury one-fourth of one per cent on their capital stock; the amount realized by the payment of this bonus has not only defrayed all the expenses of that session, but will leave a balance in the Treasury of not less than thirty-five thousand dollars—a result certainly not injurious to the finances of the Commonwealth.

My views expressed in former communications on the subject of banks and banking capital, in their relations to the currency and general interests of trade, remain unchanged. However diverse our opinions may be on this subject, it must be admitted by all that the banking and credit systems are so intimately interwoven with the business and commerce of the country, that their sudden separation or a rash innovation, would produce consequences of fearful magnitude. That the present system of banking is perfect is not pretended; that it could be essentially modified and improved will not be denied. The present derangement of the currency may and will suggest the necessity of reform, not only in the system itself, but in the management of our banking institutions.

Unlimited credits by corporations or individuals have, and ever will be an unmitigated evil. They contribute to bank expansions, rash speculations, extravagant living, and excessive over-trading; always sure to be followed by ruinous revulsions. What the remedy should be I do not deem it my province, under existing circumstances, to suggest; but to be permanent and effectual, it must accord with the natural and necessary laws of trade. The currency of a country forms no exception to these laws, and should be left to their operation and control, so far as may be consistent with the public good. It is, therefore, that a system of free banking, based on undoubted public securities, and coin in such proportion to circulation, and deposits as may be deemed sufficient to secure their conversion into specie, on demand, with proper limitations and restrictions, is deemed preferable to the present system. Its introductions would correct many existing abuses not only in the system itself but in the present mode of banking. These questions, however, with the remedies necessary to prevent a recurrence of the evils under which we now suffer, together with the nature and extent of the relief, if any, that may yet be required by the banks of the Commonwealth, to enable them to resume the payment of their liabilities in specie, are all referred to the wisdom of the Legislature. They are practical and important business questions, and as such should receive your intelligent consideration.

The present condition of our Commonwealth and country deserves at least passing remark. A severe financial revulsion has occurred, inducing a suspension of specie payment by the banks, not only of this Commonwealth, but of all the States of the Union, deranging the currency and affecting disastrously all the great interests of commerce and the industrial pursuits of the citizen. Labor is without employment, and thousands of strong, active men are now asking for work or bread. The causes assigned for these evils are almost as various as the interests or prejudices of those who undertake their explication. To whatever cause or causes they may be referred, it is neither just, nor proper, to charge all our present financial and commercial distress to the banks and their management. However much they may have contributed, other causes have operated still more directly and powerfully to produce these results; and among them first in importance and influence is the present system of low duties, in connection with the warehousing system, adopted as the policy of the General Government in 1846. The abandonment of the protective policy, as embodied in the tariff act of 1842, was resisted by Pennsylvania with a unanimity almost unparalleled in her history. Her representatives in both branches of the National Congress strenuously opposed the repeal of that act. The evils under which we are now suffering were predicted, as a consequence of such repeal. But other counsels prevailed, the act was repealed, and the industry of the country exposed to a ruinous competition with the cheap labor of foreign nations. The disastrous effects of the repeal were postponed by the operation of causes well understood by every intelligent citizen. Famine abroad created an unprecedented demand for our headstuffs, and the gold of California, although it may have added to the excitement of our progress, and contributed its full share in producing existing financial and commercial embarrassment, in millions, supplied the means of paying the overwhelming balances against us on our foreign importations. Under the present system of low duties, the excess of imports over exports has been beyond the most extravagant wants of the country. They have been enormous and ruinous—destructive of domestic industry, and involving the home manufacturer and home labor in one common ruin. We have imported more than we could pay for, and much more than we needed. Pennsylvania abounds in iron ore. Iron and its manufactures are justly regarded as important elements of her material wealth; and from her abundance, if properly fostered and protected by a wise national policy, could supply the markets of the world; and yet since the passage of the act of 1846, we have imported iron and steel, and their manufactures, more than two hundred millions of dollars in value, paid for in gold or our bonds and stocks, now held by foreign capitalists—the interest on which but adds to the burthen imposed upon us by our foreign indebtedness. The same is true of many other important branches of home industry. Many millions in value of cotton and woolen goods have, during the same period, been imported, that should have been made in our own workshops, should have been worn on American, and not on British, French or German looms.

As an example of the practical working of the system, official documents exhibit the fact, that during the past four years, the imports of foreign merchandise exceeded our exports one hundred and eighty-four millions two thousand seven hundred and sixty-eight dollars; and as a consequence, the drain of the precious metals was correspondingly great. The amount of specie sent out of the country during that period, was $213,364,384;—specie imported, $26,927,427; leaving a balance against us on specie account of $186,436,957. This depleting process, aggravated by excessive importations, unsettled the currency and induced an inflated paper circulation, resulting in bank suspensions and financial embarrassment. But the evil does not end here. An inflated paper currency, by cheapening the price of money, increases in this country the cost of production, and thus, whilst the American manufacturer is exposed, under a system of low duties, to a ruinous competition with the cheap labor of Europe, he is paid for his goods in a currency less valuable than that paid to his foreign competitor. As a necessary result, the home fabric is driven from the market, and the home manufacturer ruined. The operation of these causes, stimulated by low duties, is sufficient to destroy the industrial energies of any people.

With these facts before us, it is no matter of surprise that our mills, factories and furnaces have been closed, and thousands of honest laborers thrown out of employment; that commerce has scarcely an existence, and that bankruptcy and ruin are around us, and our general prosperity paralyzed. To avoid these disasters, to which we have been periodically exposed, reform not only in our system of banking, but in our revenue laws, becomes indispensable.

If the principle of the act of 1842 had been preserved—even if its rate of duties had been reduced, our specie by millions would not have gone into foreign coffers to build up and sustain the foreign manufacturer; home industry would be prosperous, and the cry "we want work," issuing from a thousand lips in our large cities and manufacturing districts, would not now be heard; nor would a foreign debt of nearly five hundred million of dollars exist to startle and alarm us.—That system that practically prefers foreign to home labor,—that keeps our workshops in Europe, instead of building and supporting them here—that takes our gold to pay the wages of the British laborer, whilst our own are without employment and without bread,—that fills the country with foreign merchandise to the exclusion of the home fabric,—that lays the British rail upon the road through our iron districts and by our rolling mills, whilst they are silent and deserted, and that invites to speculation and extravagance, is at war with every true American interest and should be at once abandoned.

A period of low duties has always been marked by excessive importations,—large exports of specie—overtrading—bank expansions, and suspensions, and financial and commercial revulsions. Under the protective policy these peculiar and startling characteristics of free trade have all been wanting. The history of the country establishes these facts. A well regulated tariff, adjusted to protect the productive industry of the country, is not only the true policy of the government, but is a better regulator of the currency, and a more certain security against bank expansions, than any system of pains and penalties yet devised for the control of banking institutions, or the operations of capital. To this we should return. Pennsylvania is yet true to her ancient and long cherished convictions of its propriety and necessity. She may have been misled. Political and partisan pressure may have forced from her true position. This was her misfortune, not her fault.—She sees and feels the wrong, and with an emphasis intensified by her injuries, will demand redress; protection for herself and the great industrial interests of her people.

The agricultural interests of the country, should ever be fostered and sustained by the State. They are first in necessity and usefulness, and constitute the basis of State and National prosperity. Upon their progress and development, depend the success of our mechanical, manufacturing and commercial interests.

Agriculture, in its varied and multiplied relations, is the unfailing source of National wealth, and to its promotion all should contribute. Individual enterprise and liberality, State and County associations, have done much to advance this important branch of productive industry; have collected and circulated much valuable information; and encouraged by their honorable exertions, the progress of scientific and practical agriculture. Science and art have nobly proffered their aid—the State should not withhold her encouragement and support.

I have heretofore recommended the establishment of an Agricultural Bureau, in connection with some one of the State Departments, to give efficiency to the collection and diffusion of useful knowledge on this subject. Impressed with the necessity and usefulness of such a Bureau, I again earnestly recommend it to your favorable consideration.

"The Farmers' High School of Pennsylvania," an institution incorporated by the Legislature in 1855, is entitled to the special attention of the friends of Agriculture. In the teachings of this institution, the scientific and the practical are united; and whilst the art of farming and all that pertains to the management, business and work of a farm, will be the subject of instruction, the natural sciences, in their relation and application to practical agriculture, will also be taught.—The student of the institution will be enabled to test, in his daily occupation, the truth and value of the knowledge communicated.

Much of the land connected with the school has been successfully cultivated during the past year. Orchards of every variety of fruit and hedges have been planted, and many valuable improvements made. A doubled storied barn, large and convenient, as also the farmer's house and part of the out-buildings have been erected and occupied.

From the report of the trustees we learn that a "contract has been made for the erection of an edifice calculated for the residence of Professors, Lecture Halls and Dormitories for students, to be built of stone, four stories high, two hundred and thirty-three feet in front, with wings; and to cost fifty-five thousand dollars.— This building is already in progress, and it is hoped that a part of it may be put under the roof and be so far completed as to enable the Board to make arrangements to receive a few students before the close of the current year." The Legislature, at their last session, appropriated fifty thousand dollars to this institution, one half of which has been paid; the remaining twenty-five thousand dollars to be paid on condition that an equal sum be realized from other sources, within three years from the passage of the act making the appropriation.

The objects and character of this institution—its relation to agricultural knowledge, and as the pioneer in the great work of agriculture education, commend it to the generous patronage of the Legislature, and to the confidence and liberality of the people of the Commonwealth.

The report to be submitted by the Superintendent of Common Schools will present a clear and satisfactory statement of the general operation of the system during the past year.

The separation of the school from the State Department, by the act of the last session, was a just tribute to the importance and value of our Common School system. The great educational interests of the State, the care and guardianship of the intellectual, social and moral improvement of the youth of the Commonwealth, should occupy a prominent and independent position among the Departments of the Government. If the care of the treasure of the Commonwealth, the development of her material wealth, and the advancement of her political-economical interests, have received from the Government the marked and distinctive recognition of their importance; how much more should the mind of her youth—with its wondrous activities—its constantly unfolding energies, and its infinite superiority to the material and physical, claim a still higher consideration, and receive from the Representatives of the people, a more honored recognition.

As an independent Department, greater efficiency will be given to the system—a more direct and immediate supervision will be secured—the details of its operation more carefully observed—its deficiencies discovered—its errors corrected—the accomplishment of noble purposes and objects rendered more certain and the system itself saved from the dangerous and debasing influence of political excitement, and partisan prejudice.

The County Superintendent, tested by experience, has realized the just expectations of the friends of the measure, and may now be regarded as a permanent and indispensable part of the system. When committed to competent men, it has accomplished a noble work in promoting the success and usefulness of our Common Schools; and wherever the duties of the office have been faithfully performed, the character of the schools has been elevated, their number and the number of scholars increased, and the confidence and encouragement of the public secured. In the hands of incompetent men, these results have not been obtained; but on the contrary, opposition has been provoked, and the cause of common school education retarded. This office should not be committed to any but men thoroughly qualified by education and experience for the performance of its arduous and responsible duties; and if the School Directors of any county, in disregard of their obligations, from opposition either to the system of the office, select an incompetent person for the place, the odium of the act, and of failure to secure the benefits resulting from a proper and intelligent administration of the office, should rest upon them, and not upon the law authorizing the appointment. The defects of the system when clearly established, should be promptly corrected; but change is not always reform; and innovation, induced by selfishness or prejudice, may endanger its permanency and destroy its efficiency.

The Act of the 20th day of May, 1857, providing for the due training of teachers for the Common Schools of the State, by encouraging the establishment of Normal Schools within the Districts designated in the law, has received the cordial approbation of all interested in the success of our Common Schools. The passage of that act inaugurated a new era in the history of Common School education in Pennsylvania. It is a movement in the right direction; full of encouragement and hope for the greater perfection and usefulness of the system. Large and enthusiastic meetings of the friends of education have been held, in many of the districts, to promote the establishment of Normal Schools, as contemplated by the act; and liberal sums of money have been subscribed to secure this desirable object. A noble work has been commenced; and sustained by individual enterprise and liberality—encouraged by the State, and vindicated by its own intrinsic merit it must go on until State Normal Schools, in number and efficiency, equal to the supply of well trained teachers shall become the just pride and boast of Pennsylvania.

The organic structure of our system is as perfect, perhaps, as human legislation can make it; but it needs the competent and thoroughly trained teacher to give it greater vitality and efficiency, and secure the full accomplishment of the purposes of its creation. The teacher, the properly educated, the well trained, the scientific teacher, is the great want of the system. We need the teaching mind, not the antonion movements of mere physical organization or antiquated routine, to direct and control the intellectual energies of the youth of the Commonwealth. We require mind, educated mind in our schools, that knowledge may be communicated, not only effectively and practically, but that in training the young, they
