

"Eh bien, I shall be excessively belighted...

"The sooner we're away, and at work a mankin' somthin', the better I'll be pleased," said Mr. Doolittle.

"It'll well; I look to you to see that all things are ready, I shall now go on shore with Mr. Cringle to receive his last orders."

"You shall have it, doctor," said the captain as he entered the boat, which had been ordered to be ready, and with Mr. Cringle was rowed to the pier, from which they both returned to the shore.

CHAPTER III.

It was early morning. The red sun had just come up out of the Atlantic, and now brightened the slightly-rippled waters of Salem harbor.

All of her boats had been hoisted, but the captain's gig, and her officers, expecting him only, were watching the tide very impatiently for its change.

When he reached the shore, the merchant met him, and said: "Go up stairs to Kate, my dear captain, she has got some errand for you. I tried to find out, but she would only tell you."

The captain, who was in a hurry to return to his vessel, hastened up stairs into the parlor, where Miss Kate Cringle waited for him.

She was not what might strictly be termed a very handsome girl, but yet was pretty. She had a fine, plump, well-shaped figure; her hair was glossy brown, almost black; her eyes of a bright hazel.

There was no lack of strength, bold in intellect in her expression; but she was modest almost to a fault—if modesty could be faulty; for the blushes came and went like the flashes of her Aurora Borealis across a pale northern sky.

"Your good father said that you wished to see me, lady," said Seawulf, as he stood before her, actually blushing as much as she did—for a brave man is often timid before a lady; only fops, fools, and cowards are apt to be "brave" in woman's presence, where danger only exists in her love-darting eyes.

"Yes, sir," said Kate, while her eyes were downcast with modesty. "You are about to leave us on an expedition where death will be hovering above, below, and all around you, and I could not sleep all the night for thinking of it; and so I spent my wakeful hours in making for you a little token which might remind you, when far away, that there was one here who would pray for your safety, watch for your safe return, and tremble at every storm-cloud that appears."

Thus saying, she produced a small, white, silken banner, upon which was worked, in rich gold embroidery, the identical coat-of-arms which he had described to her father on the day before.

"Forgive me," she said, as she saw with what surprise he looked upon the work. "I accidentally, yesterday, overheard the sad story which you told to my father—for I was in his counting-room copying some invoices. And I could not rest; and so I made this little banner as a token of remembrance from one who feels a deep interest in your success and happiness."

She ceased to speak, and timidly raised her eyes to his, as she banded him the pretty flag.

"I thank you, lady," said Seawulf, while his voice trembled with emotion. And he took the little flag, and placed it in his bosom, next to his heart; and, after pressing her small, white hand to his lips, said:

"Excuse me that I do not tarry—my sails are loose, the anchor almost speak, and the tide will serve by the time I can get back to my vessel. Heaven bless you, and adieu!"

He was gone. And the pretty maiden stood and looked at the hand on which he had printed his last burning kiss—a salute, it is true, of respect only—looked at it as if the kiss had left a visible impression, a sign which she could look upon for all time when she thought of him.

And a still, soft sigh came up from her heart, seeming to linger on her red, sweet lips as if to part with them. She stood thus dreamily, until she heard the sound of men cheering; and then she went to the window, which fronted toward the harbor, and saw that the "Tyranicide" was under way.

(To Be Continued)

It is said that Senator Douglas of Illinois expended over $100,000 to secure his re-election to the Senate.

A PROCLAMATION TO THE LADIES.

Whereas, it appears that the days of right, honor, and integrity are fast fading away, and whereas, the unscrupulous and ignorant are daily taking advantage of the profound and learned. But it knows therefore, to all whether Maids, Wives, or Widows, that Dr. Cheesman's Female Pills are alone the certain panacea for the troubles incident to female disorganization; they alone correcting all painful menstruation, assuaging palpitations of the heart, disturbed sleep, pain in the side, and causing health and happiness to the whole sex; more especially to the married portion, as they are certain to bring on the monthly period with regularity. And whereas, these Pills are purely vegetable and entirely free from minerals, therefore perfectly harmless in their operations and wholly unlike other medicines thrust upon the public, purporting to effect the objects already detailed. Therefore, be it known, that nothing but the said Pills of Dr. Cheesman will accomplish the desired object, when disappointment has been experienced under the regime of other Pills; and the LADIES will cause their own everlasting benefit—always premising that said Proclamation in one case must be considered null and void; that is to say, that the Pills must not be taken when any female is in an interesting situation, otherwise a miscarriage will be the inevitable result.

Dalley's Magical Pain Extractor.

In all diseases inflammation more or less predominates—now to allay inflammation strikes at the root of disease—hence an immediate cure.

Dalley's Magical Pain Extractor, and nothing else, will allay inflammation at once, and make a certain cure.

Dalley's Magical Pain Extractor will cure the following among a catalogue of diseases: Burns, scalds, cuts, chafes, sore nipples, corns, bunions, strains, bites, poisons, chilblains, bites, scrofula, ulcers, fever sores, felon's, ear aches, piles, sore eyes, goit, swellings, rheumatism, scald head, salt rheum, baldness, erysipelas, ringworm, barbers itch, small pox, measles, rash, &c., &c.

To some it may seem incredulous that so many diseases should be reached by one article; such an idea will vanish when reflection points to the fact, that the salve is a combination of ingredients, each and every one applying a perfect antidote to its opposite disorder.

Dalley's Magical Pain Extractor

In its effects is magical, because the time is so short between disease and a permanent cure; and it is an extractor, as it draws all disease out of the affected part, leaving nature as perfect as before the injury. It is scarcely necessary to say that no house, workshop, or manufactory should be one moment without it.

No Pain Extractor is genuine unless the box has upon it a steel plate engraving, with the name of Henry Dalley, Manufacturer, for sale by all the Druggists and patent medicine dealers throughout the United States and Canada.
