An Incident.

A correspondent writing from Baltimore, under the date of June 2d, says: left their Catonsville camp this morning, and reached the Bolton depot at 10 o'. clock, where they embarked for Chambersburg, to join Gen. Patterson's column destined to move upon Harper's Ferry The day was sultry, and the men suffered much. As they were waiting for the locomotive, one of a gang of rebel rowdiestruck a soldier, with whom he got into an altereation about the rebellion, where upon the soldier gave him a severe drubbing, with his fists to the great merri ment of his fellow-soldiers, and the chargrin and discomfiture of the assailant and his cronies, who did not dare to in-
