C. A. Dana, Acting Secretary of war. Washington, Oct. 17, 1864.

The Chronicle of this morning contains the following correspondence from General Grant's army:

Before Petersburg, Oct. 15, 1864. Dem. A soldier belonging to the 2d Maryland Regiment was executed for desertion. This was an old case of heinous character, and good discipline could not permit the interference of mercy. The 24 way of the deserter is hard. This is, the man who leaves his command in this army expecting easier and better times within the rebel lines will soon and cer-16 tainly find himself egregiously mistaken. 11 When their back is turned upon the com-39 mand to which they belong, misfortune b dogs their steps like a sleuth-hound. A 55 life of vagabondage is before them .-34 Brief it is, and full of sorrows. Some 22 succeed in exchanging blue for gray 60 clothes. Thus clad they visit some er-32 treme portion of the line, and yield them-38 selves as deserters. Unfortunatel for 11 them, so many examinations have to be 34 gone through on their way, and at the Provost Marshal General's, that not one 51 of them ever succeeds in effecting his escape. These men are few in number .--34 They have plenty of money-bounties, ³ perhaps, for several enlistments. Their great desire is to break from control, and go where their money will beget for them enjoyment. Desertions from the enemy 554 decrease daily. The utmost vigilence is maintained by their outposts, and the man who endeavors to leave greatly endangers his life.

The rebel cavalry appear to have been massing on our left. A raid was thought to have been meditated on the railroad near Warren Station. Selections by brigades from the different divisons of the 5th Corps were held in abeyance. If the rebels had come, it would have proved for them a costly visit. One would think they had no mounted men with which to make raids. Custer and Merritt have not only mortified their insolent pride, but utterly crushed every prospect of that arm of their service ever quietly yesterday, and the result is as fol- retriving its former excellence, or achievlows : The 142d Reg.
