JAS. F. MAXWELL,

MANUFACTURER OF

Fire and Water Proof Composition GRAVEL ROOFS,

STROUDSBURG, PENNA.

RESPECTFULLY calls the attention of persons about to build, not to fail in adopting our well-known mode of Roofing, which is now principally used on almost all first-class buildings throughout the United States. Our Roofs have all the combined advantages of cheapness and durability. Being perfectly air-tight, there is none so cool in summer nor so warm in winter. They are also perfectly fire and water proof, and warranted to stand good at least for twenty-five years. Besides, they are put on at almost half the cost of either tin, slate or shingles. Persons having old tin, slate or shingle roofs leaking badly, can have them repaired and made fully as good as new, without taking off any of the old Roofs.

GREAT CHANCE FOR AGENTS.

WHAT THE PEOPLE WANT!

The Standard History of the War,

Complete in one large Volume of over 1,000 Pages.

Splendidly Illustrated with over 150 Fine Portraits of Generals, Battle Scenes, Maps and Diagrams.

In the selection of matter for this great work the author has confined himself to strictly official data derived from the reports of Northern and Southern Generals, the report of the Committee on the Conduct of the War, National and Rebel Archives, &c.

He has carefully avoided the introduction of any matter not strictly reliable and official, and has succeeded in producing what is universally demanded, a fair and impartial History of the War. The great superiority of this work over all others is everywhere acknowledged. It is marked by a degree of thoroughness and accuracy attempted by no contemporary.

Old agents, teachers, energetic young men, and all in want of profitable employment, should send at once for circulars, and see why it sells faster and gives better satisfaction than any other History published. Address:

JONES BROTHERS & CO., No. 507 Minor Street Philadelphia, Pa. May 31, 1866.—3m.

DEATH OF GENERAL SCOTT.

WEST POINT, May 29.—General Scott died at five minutes past eleven o'clock this morning. He was out on Saturday afternoon, and then showed no signs of early demise.

On Sunday he began to fail quite fast, though none of his physicians expected he would expire at such an early day.—He was perfectly conscious up to the moment of his death, though he had lost his voice some two hours previous.

He recognized the chaplain of the post ten minutes before he died, and clasped his hand in silence.

Executive Dispatch from President Johnson.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, May 29.

The President with profound sorrow announces to the people of the United States the death of Winfield Scott, the late Lieutenant-General of the army. On the day which may be appointed for his funeral the several Executive Departments of the Government will be closed. The Heads of the War and Navy Departments will respectfully give orders for the payment of appropriate honors to the memory of the deceased.

ANDREW JOHNSON.

The Last Hours of General Scott.

Lieutenant-General Winfield Scott died peacefully. Although his demise was anticipated, his death was sudden. Upon his arrival at West Point, on the 10th instant, he was feeble. Upon descending from the carriage he tottered a little, and had to pause every step as he mounted the hotel. After a few days he rallied considerably, and as late as Saturday, P. M., was out to the library and the village riding. The same day he wrote letters to friends; but a few days before he requested General Callum, commandant of the post, to indite a letter for him, which he franked himself, though in an almost illegal hand. His mind was clear to the last. His daughter, Mrs. Hoyt, of New York, who had been staying with him for some days, left here for home on Monday. At night the General was taken with a chill, and the assistant surgeon of the post, Dr. Marsh, was summoned.—Even then there appeared to be no danger, and at 9 o'clock, Tuesday, Dr. Marsh assured General Callum that he had no apprehension of immediate dissolution.

The Chaplain, Rev. F. A. French, was called in, and taking the General's hand, recited a prayer. Though quite conscious, and cognizant that death was upon him, the power of speech was gone; but the dying soldier pressed the hand of the Clergyman and bowed his head repeatedly in token of his consciousness of the last solemn rites which Mr. French was performing according to the rules of the Episcopal Church.

At five minutes after eleven, as if in a slumber, the patriot whose life has been so intimately associated with the military history of his country passed away.

The last words of General Scott are worth remembering. About twenty-five minutes before his death he addressed his hostler, Allen, saying, "James, how is the horse?" "He is well, General." "Take care of him, James," said the dying hero, and these were the last intelligible words he uttered. In less than a half-hour all was over, and General Scott had become immortal.

General Scott seemed to have a presentiment that this was his last visit to West Point, where he spent every summer for forty years. When coming from the boat he remarked to a friend that he had come to the old Academy to die, and in conversation with Captain Boynton he replied to some remark concerning his visit to West Point, that he came to be buried.

Bonnets.

The correspondent of the Boston Gazette says: "What do you think is the last fashion of London? A total abstinence of bonnets. Yes! bonnets are now no more, at least among the elite. They have had their days of splendor—of ever changing shape—of mutilation. Now, their 'dark days of nothingness' have arrived; they have disappeared. I saw, in the Park, certain ladies with nothing whatever upon their heads but—flowers. One lady wore, delicately balanced between an enormous chignon and the natural head, a bunch of violets fastened under the chin. Another on the chignon itself displaced a little mat of spring daisies. At the opera the other evening there sat before me a young girl with one large rose for her bonnet, and another was ornamented with a wreath of green, bound and festooned with white ribbon. In-doors, the effect is in a manner beautiful, but in the open air it is chilling and look like martyrdom. Unfortunately, bonnets are chiefly worn out-doors. You see I still cling to the work 'bonnet' though the substance has departed."

Extent of the Coal Fields.

The extent of the bituminous coal field surrounding Pittsburg is fifteen thousand square miles, or eight million six hundred thousand acres. The upper seam of coal in this area rating at an average depth of six feet, is estimated to contain 23,516,430,000 tons of coal, which, at two dollars per ton, or a little over seven cents per bushel, would be worth $163,932,800,000—a sum equal to the payment of the national debt nearly twenty times, supposing it to be four thousand millions; or an amount equal to the gold and silver products of California and Nevada for more than a thousand years, if they yielded one hundred millions annually.

"FEMALE PICKPOCKETS" are nearly as numerous in New-York as the male operators in that line.

They are generally clad in costly attire, and ape the manners of well-bred ladies. Two of these dangerous characters were disposed of by the Court of Sessions last week, as we learn from the following extract from a city paper:

Ellen Johnson and Ellen Saunders, two very fashionable dressed women were put on trial for stealing a pocket-book containing $10 from the pocket of Euphemia Del Hoyo, a Spanish lady. The woman Johnson is probably the most celebrated pickpocket in this country. Her husband, Lee, who was one of the most skillful pickpockets in the world, tried to reform. To show that he intended to become honest, he went to California and started a hotel, and there died. His wife Mrs. Lee, alias Johnson on the death of her husband, returned to the city of New York, and resumed the nefarious business which she had been taught. The woman Saunders is related, according to the police information, to a family of seven thieves who have been tutored to steal. The evidence in this case was conclusive and both the "ladies" were found guilty.—They were sentenced to six months in the Penitentiary and fined $50. In passing sentence Judge Dowling remarked: "You two women are well known to this Court as notorious professional pickpockets.—You travel Broadway every day, steal in the streets, steal in the stores, steal everywhere. You generally select your victims ladies in deep mourning who have lost a husband or a child—some woman whose mind is wrapped up in her family troubles. You rob these poor women whose minds are entirely won for the moment from the things of this world; they are robbed with impunity, and if the thieves are caught, the heart that is wounded by affliction is ready to forgive and forget.—No mercies should be extended to you."

Swift Retribution.

A few nights ago the captain of a ship lying at a pier in New-York, was aroused by a noise, and saw a man standing over him with a revolver, saying if he moved he was a dead man! The captain lay quiet and the fellow backed out of the cabin.—As soon as he reached the deck, the captain sprang from his berth, and seized his revolver, rushed up stairs. The man was just about stepping on the wharf, when he fired, shooting him dead on the spot. An examination of the body proved it to be that of a clerk in the bank where the captain was in the habit of depositing his funds, and from whence on the day of the attempted robbery, he had drawn out quite a large sum, which was known to the clerk, and to obtain which, the robbery, which cost him his life, was attempted.

General Logan is said to be responsible for the following story:

A man being found dead one cold winter's morning in the mountains around Chattanooga, and suspiciously near a wayside tavern, a Tennessee Sheriff, who was a near relative of the rebel Gen. Pillow, summoned a jury to sit on the case.—"Gentlemen," said the sapient Sheriff to the jury, "our duty is to find whether the deceased came to his death in one of the three ways—whether, first, by accident; whether, second, by incidence; whether, third, at the hand of an incendiary." The jury, after due deliberation, found "that the deceased came to his death at the hands of Reuben Judkins, tavern keeper, who caused the deceased to be frozen to death, by feloniously mixing too much water with his whisky."

Make Your own Ink.

Go to the Drug Store and get half an ounce of extract of logwood, and ten grains of bichromate of potash. Be sure you get just these articles and not some substitute for them. Dissolve them in a quart of hot rain water. When cold, pour it into a glass bottle, or some vessel fit for chemical uses, and leave it uncorked ten or twelve days. Exposure to the air is indispensable. The ink is then made, costing you about five cents a quart; it is at first an intense steel blue, but becomes black and glossy as a raven's wing. So says the Country Gentleman, after fully testing it.

There was a conflagration at Oil City, Pa., on Saturday, which destroyed half the place, at the loss of $1,000,000, which is very inconsiderably covered by insurance.

The easterly end of the Harrisburg Bridge, reaching from Harrisburg, Pa., to Foster Island,
