Moral Courage in Every Day Life

Have the courage to discharge a debt while you have the money in your pocket.

Have the courage to do without that which you do not need, however much your eyes may covet it.

Have the courage to speak your mind when it is necessary to do so, and to hold your tongue when it is prudent you should do so.

Have the courage to speak to a friend in a "seedy" coat, even though you are in company with a rich one, and richly attired.

Have the courage to make a will and a just one.

Have the courage to tell a man why you will not lend him your money.

Have the courage to "cut" the most agreeable acquaintance you have when you are convinced that he lacks principle. "A friend should bear with a friend's infirmities," but not with his vices.

Have the courage to show your respect for honesty in whatever guise it appears; and your contempt for dishonest publicity, by whomsoever exhibited.

Have the courage to wear your old clothes until you can pay for new ones.

Have the courage to obey your Maker, at the risk of being ridiculed by man.

Have the courage to prefer comfort and propriety to fashion in all things.

Have the courage to acknowledge your ignorance rather than to seek credit for knowledge under false pretences.

Have the courage to provide entertainment for your friends within your means—not beyond.

The Sad Fall of a Public Man.

A St. Louis newspaper correspondent narrates the following lamentable story:—Coming down Chestnut-street, St. Louis, one day a few weeks since, I was struck by the appearance of an old man past fifty, who wore a thread-bare coat, shiny with constant wear, and whose hat was bruised and seedy. His head was bent towards the earth, and his walk was a tottering shuffle, the effect of whisky and old age. He reeled from one side of the pavement to the other, and at last brought up against a lamppost on a corner, when a young-looking loafer coming along saluted him with, "Halloo, Jim! Come and take a drink?" The old man's eyes brightened, and, arm-in-arm, he sauntered along to the nearest groggery with his companion. Five years ago that old man was James Green, United States Senator from Missouri, and in days of the Kansas and Leecompton matters, he was next to Stephen A. Douglas, the ablest debater in Congress. But the war broke out, Mr. Green was sent to the rebel Congress, soon lost his property, his position and his character, and now he is a poor drunkard, and earns barely a pittance of a living as a calaboose byster.

Sydney Smith's Common Sense.

Never give way to melancholy; resist it steadily, for the habit will encrease.—I once gave a lady two-and-twenty receipts against melancholy. One was a bright fire; another to remember all the pleasant things said to and of her; another to keep a box of sugar plums on the chimney piece, and a kettle simmering on the hob.

Never teach false morality. How exquisitely absurd to tell girls that beauty is no value—dress of no use! Beauty is of value; her whole prospects and happiness in life may often depend on a new gown or a becoming bonnet, and if she has five grains of common sense, she will find it out. The great thing is to teach her their just value, and that there must be something better under the bonnet than a pretty face for real happiness.—But never sacrifice truth.

I am convinced digestion is the great secret of life; and that character, talents, virtues and qualities are powerfully affected by beef, mutton, pierrest and rich soups. I have often thought I could feed or starve men into many virtues and vices, and affect them more powerfully with the instruments of cookery than Timotheus could do formerly with his lyre.

A good character is to a young man what a firm foundation is to the architect who proposes to erect a building on it; he can build with safety and inspire all who behold it with confidence in its solidity. A helping hand will never be wanting; but let a single part of this be defective and you go on a hazard, amidst doubting and distrust, and ten to one it will tumble down at last and mingle all that was built on it in ruin. Without a good character poverty is a curse; with it, scarcely an evil. Happiness cannot exist where good character is not. All that is bright in hope of youth, all that is calm and blissful in the sober sensibility of life, all that is soothing in the vale of years centres in and is derived from a good character—therefore acquire this as the first and valuable good.

A Newspaper editor inadvertently wrote about a woman who had not been buried with proper observance, the following sentence: "She was buried like a dog with her clothes on." Next week he saw his mistake and corrected it thus: "She was buried with her clothes on like a dog." The third week, exasperated with the previous blunders, he had it thus: "Like a dog with her clothes on she was buried." He gave it up.

The election comes off October 9th.

Go to the polls.

A Sporting Reporter Slightly Tight.

The Buffalo Commercial, having sent a special to report the great racing tournament between Dexter and Butler, sums up the result as decidedly a losing business. We have only room for the THIRD ROUND.

At the call of the judges Dexter went first to the bat after three false starts, with Butster acting as center field at the quarter pole, when the ropes were cut, and an alarm of police was raised, with Dexter three lengths against the cushion, and gradually passing the score to Butster.

Notwithstanding the tremendous pace at which they were going, Butster was a good second, behaved wonderfully well, and showed as a pheasant, though the balls broke badly for him, and he was not accustomed to a left hand pitcher.—Swinging round the half mile stretch, Butster took his gruel kindly, and Dexter's mawley straight on the dial, Dexter continuing gradually to close up, with the evident intention of shutting him out. Butster was not to be led, and again broke away, with Dexter at his heel, which drew the charot profusely. It was now anybody's race, and large investments were made on the favorite at any odds.—But Dexter having read a paper "On the Antediluvian races, with some speculations as to whether they were the best three in five, together with their effect upon the decimal and Metric System of the Silurean Period," had it all his own way, and ran the game out with ease, Butster's seconds throwing up the sponge in forty-five minutes.

Change in the Manner of Voting.

At the last session of the Legislature an act was passed changing the manner of voting in the several counties of this Commonwealth. Hereafter the voting will be done in the following manner:—"One ticket shall embrace the names of all judges of the courts voted for, and to be labeled 'judiciary'; one ticket shall embrace the names of all State officers voted for, including office of Senator, Members of Assembly, if voted for, and Members of Congress, if voted for, and be labeled 'county'; one ticket shall embrace the name of all township officers voted for, and be labeled 'township'; one ticket shall embrace the names of all borough officers voted for, and be labeled 'borough'; and each class shall be deposited in a separate ballot box."

Soldiers, Look out for the Assessments.

There are a large number of returned soldiers, who during the four years of war, lost their assessments at their usual places of residence. Some of them secured the right to vote under the article of the Constitution allowing soldiers to vote; but many of them no doubt neglected to be properly qualified last Fall. To all such, we would suggest that it is their duty to watch the assessment lists which are required to be posted at various places in their townships in a short time. If they should not find their names there, they should be particular to attend the extra assessments and secure their rights. Once assessed, and having paid their taxes, they will be ready to vote in October, as it is their privilege and duty to do as faithful citizens.

A dispatch to the Tribune from Columbus, Ohio, says that in conversation with Governor Cox, of that State, "General Grant and Admiral Farragut declared their disapproval of the President's policy and commended that of Congress.—Both gentlemen said substantially that they were participants in the President's campaign tour by express instructions, and not from any inclination on their part." This is just what the loyal people of the country have all along supposed. The idea that these brave men were willing to surrender the fruits of the victory they so gallantly won over treason, was as unjust as it was humiliating.

A Toledo gentleman had a servant girl in his employ who dreamed that No. 6391 was going to draw a prize in O'Brien's Chicago gift enterprise. She asked him to write a letter in which she would enclose the money for that ticket. He did so. When the lottery was drawn he discovered by the papers that 6391 had drawn $10,000 in greenbacks. Saying nothing of this, he proposed marriage to the girl, was accepted and immediately married. Then he informed her of the luck of 6391, but was surprised at being told that she had afterwards concluded not to buy any ticket in the lottery.

The Union men of the Sixth Congressional District, composed of Lehigh and Montgomery counties, have acted wisely
