OUR SCRANTON LETTER.

Scranton, April 23, 1871.

FRIEND SCHOCH:—Another week has passed away, and with it, no new developments in regard to the all absorbing question, "resumption," have been brought to light. Vague rumors are continually in circulation upon the street. At one time our citizens are thrown into the highest state of excitement, over the report that the miners have decided to resume on a certain day, and almost immediately that bright hope is blasted with another, that they are determined never to resume again, except they get the basis for which they suspended last fall.

The Democratic members of Congress have just issued an address to the people, which arraigns the Republican party for making rapid strides towards the centralization of power, for multiplying offices beyond all precedent, to the widespread production of dishonesty and corruption; for refusing to reform the internal revenue and the tariff systems under which the ship building and nearly all other business interests are languishing; and for voting away to corporations nearly 200,000,000 acres of public lands to the enrichment of greedy speculators.
